No. 1.

[This document should have appeared in the previous volume.]

Acting Consul Jakins to Sir Austen Chamberlain.—(Received December 29.)

HIS Majesty's acting agent and consul at Jeddah presents his compliments to His Britannic Majesty's Principal Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs and his the honour to transmit copy of a despatch to the Minister for Foreign Affairs, Mecenof to-day's date, respecting the Haramain wakfs.

Jeddah, December 4, 1927.

Enclosure in No. 1.

Acting Consul Jakins to the Minister for Foreign Affairs, Mocea.

(After compliments.)

Your Excellency.

I AM directed by His Britannic Majesty's Principal Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs to refer to the question of Haramain wakts, which, as your Excellency is aware, was raised during the conversations between His Majesty the King and Sir Gilbert Clayton, and to inform your Excellency that His Britannic Majesty's Government have now reconsidered this question in the light of the explanations given by His Majesty to Sir Gilbert Clayton and, of the three specific requests pur forward by him, which, as your Excellency is aware, were for—

(c.) Information as to what Awkaf el Haramain existed in India

(b.) Advice as to the proper steps to take with a view to preferring and establishing such claims as he might wish to make.

(c.) The normal measure of guidance and assistance to any delegation which be might decide to send to India, or elsewhere, for the purpose of making enquiries and preferring claims.

I am accordingly to request that your Excellency will be so good as to inform His Majesty that His Britannic Majesty's Government regret that, since it is their invariable principle never to interfere in religious matters or in the decisions of religious or civil courts, they cannot give him any promise of future assistance in the matter of Haramain wakfs. Subject to this reservation, however. His Majesty may rest assured that His Britannic Majesty's Government will in this matter, as in others, always be ready to consider sympathetically any request which he may make for assistance or advice.

As regards His Majesty's three specific requests, His Britannic Majesty's Government regret that it is impossible for them to undertake themselves the collection of information as to what Haramain wakfs exist in territories under their control, since such action would certainly be interpreted by Moslem opinion in some of those territories as Government intervention on one side in a dispute which ex hypothesi is sub judice; and the same difficulty arises to some extent as regards the two other requests formulated by His Majesty. So far as India is concerned, the law does not recognise religious courts, but the civil courts are open to all alike. and His Majesty can rest assured that if he decides to resort to litigation through his legal representatives in India, no obstacle will be placed in his way.

(Respecta.)

H. G. JAKINS.

No. 2.

Consul Stonehower-Bird to Sir Austen Chamberlain,-(Received January 10.)

(No. 1.) Jeddah, January 10, 1928. (Telegraphie.) P.

IN a letter dated 23rd December, addressed to me from Riyadh, Ibn Saud says that relations between Iraq and Nejd have become very critical, and that trouble has also occurred between certain of his subjects in the Persian Gulf and British officials He is doing everything in his power to avoid any incident which might prejudice his relations with Great Britain, and is in daily correspondence with His Majesty's High Commissioner at Bagdad, but without result. In these circumstances be appeals to His Majesty's Government to assist him in finding a way out of his difficulties.

Though the letter is vague, Dr. Damluji informs me that to Ibn Saud's mind the only way of achieving a settlement is for His Majesty's Government to name a delegate to examine the question at issue. This delegate might subsequently attend a conference of representatives of Nejd. Iraq and Koweit.

I informed Dr. Damluji that I would report His Majesty's opinion by telegraph It seemed to me, however, that it would be more satisfactory if the King agreed to have a private conference with a representative of the High Commissioner.

No. 3.

Sir Austen Chamberlain to Consul Stonehewer-Bird (Jeddah).

(No. 1.) Foreign Office, January 13, 1928. I APPROVE your language in your telegram No. 1 of 10th January : Nejd-

You should reply in the following sense to Ibn Saud :-

"His Majesty's Government greatly appreciate His Majesty's confidence in them and are most anxious to assist in every way in their power to find a solution of the present difficulties between Nejd and Iraq. For this purpose they hope that His Majesty may find it possible at an early date to accept the invitation which they sent him on 2nd January to meet Colonel Haworth, the Resident in the Persian Gulf, for a discussion of the regrettable misunder-standing which has arisen in regard to the treaty. They are unable to understand on what grounds His Majesty and the Nejd tribes could regard the construction of the Busaiyah fort as an infraction of the Uquir Protocol; the latte speaks of 'Ala Atraf-al-Hudud' (near the frontier), whereas Busaiyah is no less than 50 miles from the neutral zone. It is of the first importance that this misunderstanding abould be cleared up. His Majesty's Government are confident that this object will be fully attained at a meeting between His Majesty and Colonel Haworth, but should any further discussion appear necessary at a later stage they will be quite prepared to consider other arrangements for a meeting between representatives of themselves and His Majesty.

"Meanwhile they hope that His Majesty will realise their own difficulties. They have a very definite responsibility in respect of Iraq, and for this purpose the High Commissioner at Bagdad is their representative. This responsibility applies more particularly to the maintenance of order and defence. Innocent Iraqia have been murdered and robbed by Nejd tribes. Just as His Majesty must accept responsibility for the actions of the Nejdis, so His Majesty's Government must observe their responsibilities for the defence of the Iraqis. It is in these circumstances that they have, as His Majesty has already been notified, been compelled to authorise their air force in Iraq to punish the raiders and, if necessary, to pursue them across the border. His Majesty will realise that these punitive measures are justified and inevitable, but that they are in the nature of police measures against criminals and are in no way military measures against Neid

"His Majesty's Government do not understand reference to trouble between British officials and Nejd subjects in Persian Gulf, but this would seem to be a matter which could readily be cleared up in discussion with Colonel Haworth."

No. 4.

Consul Stonehower-Bird to Sir Austen Chamberlain.—(Received January 16, 1928.)

(No. 137.)

Jeddah, December 30, 1927.

I HAVE the honour to transmit herewith a translation of an article which appeared in the "Um el Qura" of the 16th instant. It is, I understand, from the pen of Sheikh Yussuf Yassin, the Director of Publicity, and as such must be regarded as partially, if not wholly, inspired

2 The writer, after protesting the peaceful intentions of the Government and people of the Hejaz and Nejd, inveighs against the malicious tone of the Iraq press in matters concerning this country. Iraq papers are accused of making capital out of the discontent of certain border tribes with the Ibn Saud regime. This, it is pointed out, is grossly unfair, as such discontent as exists is the result of the restraint exercised by Iba Saud in his determination to keep to the letter of his agreements.

3. After mentioning Iraq raids into Nejd territory and making a point of the conciliatory spirit shown by Nejd, the writer turns to the question of the present incidents on the frontier. He asserts that the building of the post at Busaiyah was a definite breach of the agreement between the two Governments. The Bedonins regarded it as such and insisted with Ibn Saud that they should be allowed to demolish the post. The King refused to countenance any such action, but the distance of his capital from the seat of the trouble was so great that the task of restraining the frontier tribes was most difficult. The King was endeavouring by all means to reach a peaceful solution of the question. The authorities in Iraq are invited to co-operate in removing from the minds of the people their unfounded suspicions of any cril intentions on the part of Nejd, and in ensuring peaceful and friendly relations between these neighbours, united as they are by bonds of race and language. 4. I have chicited from Dr. Damluji, in the course of two interviews which I have recently had with him, an expression of his views. He is genuinely distressed at the occurrence of the incidents and slightly resentful of the tone of the comments appearing in the English press. He does not himself insist very strongly that the building of the post was a definite breach of agreement, but affirms that the tribes had considered it as such: he feels that the action of Iraq was ill-advised, and that courtesy and policy demanded that Ibn Saud should have previous knowledge of Iraq's intention. No one, he said, could seriously suspect Ibn Saud of having tacitly permitted the raids to take place, much less of having instigated them. I replied that I had seen no hint in the press that Ibn Saud either approved or instigated the raids. It was only natural that the King should be criticised, seeing that the tribes responsible owed allegiance to him; the predominant note seemed to me to be one rather of disappointment that Ibn Saud, who had gained a well-earned reputation as the restorer of peace and security, had been unable to restrain these turbulent elements.

5. Dr. Damluji reverted to his argument that if the authorities in Iraq had thought fit to inform the King of their intention to establish the posts he would have been able to allay the suspicions of the tribes, whereas he only received information moreover, far from the seat of trouble.

6. I told Dr. Damluji that had the High Commissioner in Iraq had any idea that the establishment of the post could give rise to any suspicion he would. I felt sure, have made previous mention of it. The post was, however, so far from the frontier, as demonstrated by the map which I handed to him (Map No. 38 enclosed in your despatch No. 147 of the 7th instant) that its establishment could not possibly be interpreted as a breach of the agreement between Nejd and Iraq-

7. Copies of this despatch are being sent to Iraq, Egypt and Palestine.

No. 5.

Lord Lloyd to Sir Austen Chamberlain.—(Received January 23.)

Cairo, January 14, 1928.

WITH reference to correspondence ending with your despatch No. 1105 of the 6th ultimo, I have the honour to transmit herewith translation of a letter addressed to me by Ibn Saud and handed to me by Sheikh Hafez Wahba, as reported in the second paragraph of my private telegram of the 9th instant.

- 2. The second sentence of the King's letter does not convey exactly what Sheikh Hafez Wahba was told on the occasion of his former visit just before my return to Egypt in November last. As reported in paragraphs 7, 8 and 9 of my despatch No. 682 of the 16th November last, nothing more was conveyed to Sheikh Hafez Wabba than an expression of doubt as to the extent of his authority. It was in view of this dubiousness, expressed by the member of my staff in question, that Sheikh Hafez Wahba said he would obtain written authority from the King to speak in His Majesty's name. The phraseology used in the second sentence of Ibn Saud's letter can be regarded as an oriental amplification of what was really
 - 3. Three questions form the subject of Ibn Saud's long letter, namely :--
 - (1.) Italy's new position in Arabia, with special reference to the Yemen and
 - (2.) The position of the Shereefian rulers of Iraq and Transjordania-a position full, according to Ibn Saud, of menace for the future.
 - (3.) The position of the Bolsheviks in Arabia and their offensive against British trade interests.

4. In conversation with me, Sheikh Hafes Wahbs amplified the written statements of Ibn Sand. I will briefly summarise his remarks on the three points mentioned above.

5. Sheikh Hafez Wahbs began by saying that he wished to connect point (1) with point (3). Italy was arming the Imam Yahia and encouraging him against Asir. If a conflict were to result, the Imam would be able to count on Italian assistance in armament, while Ibn Saud might be left without any help from us. The latter's position would be extremely unpleasant. Meanwhile, the Bolsheviks were trying to penetrate economically both the Hejaz and the Yemen. Obviously this economic penetration would merely be a cover for political action directed against England. As regards the Hejaz, the drastic action taken, by Ibn Saud's orders, against the Russian steamship "Tomp" (see despatch No. 125 of the 22nd November last from the acting British agent and consul at Jeddah to you) was sufficient evidence of the King's present attitude, which was advantageous to Great Britain. It was not at all certain that the Imam Yahia would take up such a resolute attitude against the Bolsheviks, whose help he might regard as a useful supplement to that of Italy. Moreover, there were around Ibn Saud many Syrian exites, whose attitude was governed less by the interests of the Hejaz than by their anxiety to exict the French from Syria. These extremists were prepared to accept Bolshevik help to further the cause of Syrian nationalism. In this connexion, the recent visit of one of their ilk, the Emir Shekib Arsian, to Moscow was significant. The influence of these Syrian advisers would be exercised in a pro-Bolshevik sense. Ibn Saud had no desire other than to maintain and strengthen his friendly relations with England. But, if he were left alone, pressed by an enemy enjoying foreign support, harassed on other frontiers by unfriendly Shereefian rulers, he might well become troubled and accept assistance wherever he could find it. If he could rely on our support, he would not hesitate to continue his energetic resistance to Bolshevik penetration.

6. With regard to point (2), Sheikh Hafez Wahba added little to the King's written statements, though he suggested that the British officials in Iraq and Transjordania could not but be influenced by the Shereefian rulers, whose hostility to Ibn Saud was well known. I was careful to turn the conversation from this issue as quickly as possible.

With regard to the points (1) and (3), I replied that I could only communicate his observations to London. I added that I had always entertained feelings of friendship for Ibn Saud, whose long and loyal dealings with us had in the past constituted an unchanging factor in a country where almost everything else had been in a state of change

8. Sheikh Hafez Wahba also expressed the desire that the British Government would delegate a competent official, who was neither from Iraq nor the Persian Gulf, to discuss these questions with Ihn Saud with a view to finding satisfactory solutions. He mentioned Sir Gilbert Clayton as a persona grata to Ibn Saud.

9. It is not for me to enter into the thorny question of the relations between Ibn Saud and the Sherechan rulers of our mandatory territories. I think, however, that his anxieties on this score are real. He feels that Sherechan influence in Iraq and Transjordania must always be exercised to his detriment, both by pressure on British officials in those countries and by subterranean intrigue among border tribes. I think that it is only fair to take this anxiety of his into account when appreciating his general appeal for our goodwill in his many difficulties.

10. The other two points, however, are of much closer concern to Egypt as affecting our position on the Red Sea littoral. I venture to express the opinion that we cannot afford to leave Ibn Saud without guidance and help in questions of such grave interest to us as those of Bolshevik penetration into Western Arabia and of the Yemen-Asir conflict, complicated by Italian support of Imam Yahia.

11. I need hardly insist on the obvious danger to us of successful Bolehevik propaganda in a country like the Hejaz, which is the annual meeting place of so many Eastern races, either subjects or neighbours of ours. Ibn Saud's unconventional action in the matter of the Russian steamship " Tomp " shows that his present attitude is frankly anti-Belshevik. He has no doubt adopted this attitude more in his own interests than, as he soggests, in ours. Equally obvious is his almost palve attempt to invoke our assistance in South-West Arabia, as an equivalent for an anti Bolshevik attitude which he has adopted on his own initiative and for his own ends. Yet these considerations should not lead us to disregard the possibility that, if Ibn Saud finds that he can get no support from us, he might well, under the influence of Syrian extremists, modify his present policy towards the Bolsheviks, with possible results highly detrimental to our interests in Arabia and, by natural extension, in the Sudan and Egypt.

12. As far as my horizon extends, South West Arabia would seem to be the field in which we should endeavour more particularly to help Ibn Saud, and thus encourage him to stay within our orbit. Moreover, our interests in those parts seem to coincide with those of Ibn Saud.

13 I fear that it would be difficult to satisfy Ibn Saud with arguments based on the second paragraph of your despatch No. 1105 of the 6th ultimo. If Italy is arming the Imam and supports his claim to the whole of Asir, the danger to Ibn Sand would appear to be very real. It is perhaps unlikely that Italy would precipitate a conflict between Yemen and Neid, though her object in doing so would seem to be fairly clear, namely, the extension of her ally's dominion over Asir. But this object would no doubt be more conveniently approached by indirect ways. The Idrisi's internal position appears to be rather unstable, and the reports of intrigues of pro-Italian and pro-Imam Yahia elements in Asir are too continuous to be disregarded. A report has even reached me to the effect that the Idrisi himself has been in touch with an Italian agent. If all this unrest were to result in tribal secessions to Imam Yahia on any large scale, Ibn Saud might be forced either to make war for the preservation of Asir or to acquiesce in the extension of his rival's rule over the whole of Asir. Either alternative would be full of peril both to our position in Arabia and to Angle-Italian relations. Moreover, Ibn Saud's discomfiture in South-West Arabia, coming on the top of his difficulties with the more functional elements in Nejd and of his frontier troubles with Iraq and Transjordania, might shake his position to the verge of dewnfall. Such a consummation, with its resulting anarchy in the Arabian Peninsula and on our mandatory frontiers, must obviously be extremely detrimental to our present interests.

14. Italy's appearance in Arabia as a supporter of the pretensions of the Imam Yahia can hardly be regarded as friendly to us, for the Imam apart from his past hostility to us and his continued occupation of sections of the Aden Protectorate, is obviously aiming at a territorial extension in Asir which could only be secured by the discomfiture of Ibn Sand, whose maintenance is at present important to British interests. I think that this is the crux of the question, and that we must examine it frankly, firstly among ourselves and then with the Italians, in the hope of finding some solution which will safeguard the Saud's position and our own interests without imposing any humiliation on the Imam Yahia and his Italian partisans.

15. I am inclined to think that a visit by Sir Gilbert Clayton to Ibo Sand would afford a good opportunity for a friendly discussion of all these problems and would perhaps help to allay many of Ibu Sand's anxieties and suspicions, which, if allowed to grow unchecked, may imperil his good relations with us

I have, &c. LLOYD, High Commissioner.

Enclosure in No. 5.

Ibn Saud to Lord Lloyd

12 Jemadi-utt Thani, 1346. (Translation.) (December 6, 1927.) (After Complimenta) HAFIDH WAIRA has submitted to us a summary of the conversation between him and the secretary of your Excellency, and he informed us that the latter enquired whether he (Hafidh Wahba) wished the conversation to be communicated privately to the British Government. The secretary also indicated that he saw no hindrance to the establishment of a written connexion between us and your Excellency for the remedying of incidents which might happen in a circumstance like that which was discussed by Hafidh Wabba and the secretary of your Excellency.

I am glad to open to your Excellency the question of the state of affairs in the Arabian Peninsula and of its relation to His Majesty's Government from some points of view, so that we may be able to remedy the present state of affairs in a manner conducive to the interests of both sides. It is clear to your Excellency, and, indeed, to anyone who follows the history of our personal political relations with His Majesty's Government, which in our policy we have followed (that) these have never been opposed to His Majesty's Government. Always, on the other hand, we have avoided anything tending to create a difference between us and them, despite much that we found, and still find, in the behaviour of certain officials of His Majesty's Government, or in the behaviour of certain individuals who have sought British protection and whom the British Government still defend. Moreover, we have resisted and still resist the influence of certain Governments which desire supreme economic influence in the Arabian Peninsula, from our wish to protect British interests and to prevent their opponents from touching these interests at all. Therefore, the rights of our friendship to His Majesty's Government necessitate close attention to our interests and theirs, and our consistency in friendship should have its reward in friendly consideration.

In this connexion, I summarise for your Excellency the present position, in order that we may assist each other in so remedying it as to safeguard the interests of both parties. We have before us three important matters which need a remedy :-

1. The new attitude of Italy towards the Arabian Peninsula.

2 The position of the Shereefians in Iraq and Transjordan, more particularly in recent times. If the state of affairs in this respect be left as it is, it will produce evil results.

3 The attitude of the Bolsheviks towards the Arabian Peninsula and their conflict with British economic influence.

The British Government was, and still is, in closer relationship with the Arabian Peninsula than other Governments are. (Hitherto) we had not found any State competing with the British Government in this relationship. But recently Italy appeared in the Red Sea and she has begun to think of greatly extending her ambitions. Italy proposed to us that we should enter into agreement with her even before she interfered with the Imam Yahia. And this was at the beginning of our entry into the Hejaz. We did not wish to make this connexion because of our desire to strengthen our political relations with the British Government. When the Italian Government lost hope in this respect, it quickly turned to the Imam Yahia and concluded with him that commercial agreement which was published. We strongly suspect that the Italian Government followed this with a secret agreement, the effects of which appeared to us in its recent negotiations with us regarding its recognition of the Kingdom of the Hejaz and Nejd and its dependencies. The last demand of the Italian Government from us was that we should promise it to preserve in the Arabian Peninsula peace and tranquillity which constituted the goal of the Government of the King of Italy. The Italian Government brought the question of Asir into the discussion in a clear manner, insomuch as it demanded that it should recognise us as King of the Hejaz and Nejd and its dependencies, with the exclusion of Asir from that recognition. What does Italy seek with this attitude? Does not the British Government see that this is an encroachment of Italy on the rights and national authority of the country (i.e., Arabian Peninsula), and, secondly, that this is an act of Italy (intended) to strengthen and confirm her ally (Imam Yahin) against the British Government in the direction of his (Imam Yahia's) frontiers adjoining (the territory of) the British Government and against a friend of the British Government, as we, for our part, see it? And what a story Sir Gilbert Clayton told us, on the day of our meeting in Jeddah, that the result of his meeting in Rome with Cavaliere Gasparini was the notification to the Italian Government of the British Government's attitude, that the British Government do not wish to interfere in the affairs of the Arabian Peninsula and do not accept to see others interfering in its affairs. This attitude of the Italians I consider to be blameworthy, both with regard to us and to the British Government As for ourselves, we have already instructed our Department for Foreign Affairs to inform the Italian Government that it should recognise our rights in all our territory without condition or reservation, or otherwise we do not require this its recognition. This is the situation with Italy. We want to be in complete agreement with the British Government in this matter, to protect our interests and theirs, and we expect good results to both parties, insha'llah, as a consequence of your study of this situation

As for the question of the position of the Shereefians in Iraq and Transjordania, more particularly of recent times, it is unsatisfactory and augura no future of calm and peace. If the matter was between ourselves and them only, it would be easy, and we should, with God's strength, put an end to it prudently. But between us and them there are the British Government and our pledges which it behaves us to keep, and our friendship with the British Government which we covet.

Since the Treaty of Hadda, which prohibited raiding, there has been from the Transjordan side an increase in the number and extent of raids by tribes of Transjordan upon the people of Nejd, and, despite all conversations and pacific negotiations, we have not been able to secure any of the loot; so much so that we are weary of claiming. The situation led us to leave to Sir Gilbert Clayton the solution of this matter, in accordance with the just investigation which the British Government carries out, but as yet we have obtained nothing. This is the attitude of Transjordania, whose tribal incursions against our tribes still continue till this day.

As for the Iraq situation, the Government of Iraq has ventured to break many of the articles of the agreements which existed between us, of which we present to you the following :-

1. The Shammar tribes took refuge in Iraq, and the Iraq Government incited them to seek refuge there. Then it incited them to raid us. It wanted, or those villains wanted, to raid us, and they were of one mind. They went out into Syrian territory to raid as from there. Of this the High Commissioner in Iraq notified us, and we protested against it, and said that if they raided us they would have to pass either through Transjordan territory or through Iraq territory. There was no reply to this protest of ours for about ten months, when his Excellency informed B 4

Resident in the Persian Gulf of evil results if pledges are not kept and the buildings razed. Up to this hour we have obtained no result, while the present position on the frontiers is most critical

But the Iraq Government has not abstained from that sort of thing. The latest to full into or hards against term the Material Illianian inviting some of the leaders of our tribes to discuss various matters concerning the tribes. We protested against this to the High Commissioner in Iraq on the 1st Fabi-ul-Awwal, 1946. So far he has returned no reply to us.

3 [sic]. The agreements between ourselves and Iraq and Transpordan forbid

4 From time to time motor cars of officials of the Iraq Government and seroplanes continue to arrive and get mixed up with the Hedouin. This creates one of two direnguatances: either a state of affairs in which the Bedouin who come in contact with them run away from the cars and behave towards the owners in a manner having deplorable consequences, so that afterwards a dispute arises, with discussions between us and them; or else a state of affairs where the interference is (intended) to affect some of the Bedouin, so that they follow the Iraq Government and to cause trouble within our country

We have drawn the Iraq Government's attention to these matters more than once without obtaining anything at all from correspondence. This is a question while it should be unider, be solved prudently, because if the position remains as it is at present, it will expose our two countries to an unsatisfactory state of affairs (which God forbid!) Enclosure in No. 6.

Jeddah Report for Persod December 1 to 31, 1927.

THE month of December has been chiefly notable for the number of rumours current in the Sook—rumours of war and rumours of internal strife. Wild bazaar gossip is an epidemic which rages most strongly when, as at the present time, there is a slump in the pilgrim trade. Preparations were, the gossips told us, being made for war against Iraq and Transportan. The Gut Gut, Iba Bujad's tribe, had seized Taif The latter rumour was later categorically denied, and the former appears to have arisen owing to the arrival at Jeddah and transport to biecea of the cartridges and clips recently ordered in England. To effect the transport of this ammunition, causels were cummandeered by the Government and no payment was made to the owners or drivers. The result was a strike lasting four days, during which time newly arrived Javanese pilgrims were obliged to delay their departure for Necca.

2. Camelmen have, however, accord a valuable point this year. The idea has been instilled into the dayanese by certain leaders of religious thought, prompted beyond a doubt by interested parties, that to travel to Mecca by car is an act of impiety. If this is a reason that it is a reason of the process that it is a reason of the parties process that it is believed it if the parties are at present more than 300 cars equipped for the palgrinage traffic, and it is believed it if the palgrinage traffic, and it is believed it if the palgrinage traffic and it is believed.

A Though many of the more energia regulations which the recent religious is a strong many of the more energia regulations which the recent religious prohibition of jewellery and silk raiment, have been removed, there still remain certain restrictions unpalatable to European residents, notably the prohibition of the import of a large section of the endors, the strains of the gramophone is the staple recreation of a large section of the colony, the blow is bard.

4. Events on the Nejd Iraq frontier have naturally formed a constant topic of conversation, and much ink has been spent thereon in the local press. The tone both of discussions and articles is conciliatory, though resentment is shown at the criticism of 1bn Saud in the English and especially in the Iraq press. It is felt that the King has loyally adhered to his engagements, and that Iraq, by establishing a post at have the latest with a late that the frontier tribes, was asking for trouble. The press insists that the establishment of the post was a breach of the agreement, while the Director of Foreign Affairs, as the result of a study of the latest War Office map of the district, now considers the question debatable. In any event he holds the action of the Iraq authorities to have been, if not disloyal, discourteous and ill-advised. Ibn Saud, he affirms, is doing all in his power to counter Feisal-el-Derweigh's action.

5. News from Amr has been scrappy, though Dr Damfuji recently stated that the conference at Jizan had reached a deadlock, that the Hejas representative was being recalled to make his report, and that it was hoped to reassemble the conference at some other town, preferably Port Sudan, in a month's time.

6. Lattle progress appears to have been made towards the recognition by Italy of laborious and unsatisfactory arrangement. He has hopes, however, of evolving a "formula" acceptable to both parties.

His appearance and conversation support this belief. It is regrettable that the only apparent quality be should have there has been and the transmit In the absence of the Stall,

the Hejaz ship of State is indeed rudderless

9. Under the heading of public works in progress may be noted the new condenser now being erected by two Scottish engineers from Merrilece Watson and the new motor road from Jerblah to Mecca. The former will be put into use before the Haj. There is much scopticism as to the lasting powers of the latter. The system adopted in to cover an 8-yard wide track of desert sand with large houlders, fill the interstices with smaller stones, and then crush the whole with the aid of the recently imported stoum-roller. It is felt that in a short time the entire road will disappear into the bowels of the desert, though optimists give the road a two years' life.

10. An endeavour is being made by the Standard Oil Company, instigated by Mr. Philop, to one would Pirel tr- the beat h mater. Meanwhile, Mr Philby's staff and offices increase to size and cost without any apparent reason. His expression of anti-British sentiments is a constant source of amazement to those who meet him for the first time and who fail to realize that he merely argues for the sake of argument, and that his bark is much wome than his bits. He is a numance rather than a power of ovil; the King, I am convinced, though he likes and admires him, rarely takes him seriously

11. The British colony, which already numbers fifteen, is to be increased by the advent of two engineers, one to take charge of the new condensor and the second to found a training school for chauffeurs and to supervise the Government workshops and датыдов.

12. The arrival of numbers of chauffenrs from India, Aden and the Sudan has resulted in an increasing number of complaints to the agency. The wages of a skilled chauffour in the Hejax reach £10 or even £12 a month, while the minimum wage is about £7. Indians, Sudaness and chauffours in Adea presumably claim much lower wages in their own countries; they sign contracts before embarking binding themselves for two years for a monthly wage of £3 or £4, and on arrival find that this is not a living wage. It would be well if publicity could be given to these facts with a view to deterring chauffeurs from making contracts for service at less than the rates of pay prevailing in the Heinz.

13. During the period under review five slaves were repetriated.

14. Some 5,000 pilgrans, moluding 800 Malayans, have already arrived for the 1928 Haj.

He maista that building of post was naturally regarded by tribes as a breach of Ugair protocol He had previously refused permission to his Arabs to build at Line. and other wells (Lina is more than 30 miles from the neutral zone) near frontier. His present situation is most difficult—he must either fight the whole of Nejd in support of Iraq or find bimself in conflict with His Majesty's Government, an eventuality which he cannot face

He begs His Majesty's Government to find a solution. I told Dr. Damluji that In I step towards finding this solution lav in the King's acceptance of His Majesty's Government's invitation to meet Colonel Haworth This meeting with a representative of His Majesty's Government, who could have no pro-Iraq bias, could not fail to clear the air and might well result in a final agreement

Hafez Walton has communicated to me a letter dated 25th January, and addressed by Ibn Saud to His Majesty's agent at Jeddah

Hafez Wahba has also received subsequent telegrams from Ibn Saud showing that the latter is much excited by our aerial action over Nejd territory

Hafer Wabba is very insistent on the gravity of the aituation and the need for prompt actilement of the question of desert fortifications. He even said that he was prepared to proceed to London if that would be helpful. He renewed his suggestion that some Imperial British delegate, being neither from Iraq nor Persian Gulf, should be sent at once to discuss the matter with Ibn Saint. He suggested Al Hassa as a mitable meeting place if some such British delegate could proceed there at once, flying from here to Iraq

He suggested that at such a conference it would be advisable to discuss the important question of the surrender by Iraq and Nejd respectively of each other's offending subjects taking refuge in the other's territory

I wenture to urge expediency of sending Sir Gilbert Clayton, who enjoys the confidence of both 1bn Sand and Iraq, to meet 1bn Sand as mon as possible The Sand evidently feels that he is not getting a fair hearing. A conference between the two might effect a detrate, and could anybow do no barm.

I hope that you will be able to give me some encouraging message for

(No. 7.) Jaddah, February 26 192 «Telegraphic)

I HAVE received a long letter from Ibn Sand in reply to message contained in your telegram No 1

The King is gratified by the friendly spirit evinced by His Majesty's Government but regrets that, owing to change in situation addiced by precipitate action on the part of British and Iraq officials, he cannot now accept invitation to meet the Resident of the Persian Gulf

He fears that, if British officials continue to lend support to anti-Nejd policy of Le Suerects the mathle and of root, to the late as at while se col In the control of the transfer to the transfer Protocol was only signed by him on express understanding that the wells frequented by his tribesmen should be freely accessible and that no building should be permitted

He protests that, while he has killed many of his own tribesmen found guilty of raids into traq and Transpordanta, raiders from those countries into Ira-Nall to ment the time to the restrict the people of Naplant discountenanced the acts of Faisal-al-Dowersh. He had delayed sending out expedition against the latter until he could come to an agreement with Iraq that escaping raiders should not be harboured. The situation had improved when be was threatened that British aircraft would punish his subjects within his territory. He did not fail to warn Iraq of the consequences, aeroplanes have since dropped has caused the death of innocent persons, reinflamed Nejd passions and placed him in an impossible position. It has dealt a real blow at his friendly relations with Great Printer. The re-pensible to re-to-in frequent British officials. Fears of Nejd. are surther increased by the news of building at Mudawara in an undelimited area

Ibn Saud protests against-

9. Another result of the increased commercial activity in the Hejaz is the pressing need for new houses. Rents are being raised annually, but are still not sudmently high to induce local capitalists to build. The population of Jeddah is encreasing rapidly, but there is practically no room within the city walls for expansion. If security continues a time will soon come when a new residential quarter must be started outside the city walls

The second of the second 1) 1, 1 , , , the shapes 30,000 pilgrims have already arrived from oversens, mostly from Batavia and Singapore. Four Indian prigrum ships have already arrived, bringing 1,272 prigrums two more are expected in the first days of February It is generally hoped that the pilgrimage from India will be dightly larger than last year, this increase will, however, be discounted by a falling off in the number of Malays. There is as yet to belief to of the harders may represent the last care South Atland Lac total pilgrimage from overseas is expected to reach 150 000, an increase of some

11 Cars are being introduced in such numbers that the Government has decided to limit the import. This new restriction is introduced ostensibly in the interests of all car owners. There are already some 300 in the restriction of 10 of the control of the contr Competition is so strong that cars are in most cases running at a loss. The Govern ment rate for the return journey-Jeddab-Medina-is £15, of which £6 represents Government tax. Owners are accepting as low a fare as £10. The Government has raised the tax on camel here without raising the fares themselves. Fodder has increased in price. The result was a strike of camelmen at Medina. The revalry between car and camel and between the motor companies will certainly react in first fill polyte, no water at they treat to the Hegar will a feet a set year the Heyer was the ar war spin or I specifit by I have a parameter last year's experience taught the wisdom of securing the services of reliable chauffeur-mechanics. All coulies who have been on board a ship not out of quarantine are sent to the quarantine island for five days. They demand and receive from the shipping agents full pay for the whole period of their stay on the island, in spite of the fact that in most cases they could have earned nothing during that period. The Government has ordered from Egypt rufficient anti-plant serum for the moculation of 10,000 persons. The Dutch bacteriole dist continues has work under most difficult conditions. On a recent occasion he left his Syrian assistant in charge of the vaccination of babies. On his return he found the Syrian smoking a eigarette upstairs and a large buck nigger engaged in the work of vaccinating one patient after another without changing, sterilising or even wiping the needs. Dr van der H g a ders it f g f . I he whether his work will result in the prevention or the spread of disease. He is seriously considering the advisability of embracing Islam, feeling that unless he can visit Merca and Medina his work can be of little real value. He has great hopes of interesting American philanthropists in his work and of building a large modern hospital staff. I by American trained assistants. He would like to see the hospital so established controlled by a committee of three of the consuls of the Powers represented at Jeddah He would probably have more success in interesting America than in inducing the Government to agree to any such foreign control

13. Amin Tewfik, the Egyptian consul at Jeddab, left for Cairo on the 15th. the warde excelleng her will the Frepenhall my dath the Hejaza the titles Though not of great experience, he handled the many delicate questions which fell to him to negotiate with considerable tact. I learn unofficially and privately that his successor, Said Bev late consul at Jerusalem, is out of favour with the Egyptian Foreign Office and is being sent to Jeddah as a punishment. This is difficult to believe as relations between the Hejaz and Egypt are such that a tactless or incompetent representative could cause much friction

14. Khakimoff the Soviet representative arrived at Jeddah on the 21st instant He left here in September last in a very poor state of health, and was undergoing treatment in Europe when recalled to his post. The Tomp incident to what reference was made in the Jeddah report for November last, provoked his recall It was felt that Tumetoff, the Chargé d'Affaires in Khakimoff's absence, had mishaudled the situation Tumetoff twice went to Mecca just before his chief's arrival to press the authorities to accord a ceremonial reception to Khakimoff on landing at Jeddah Dr. Damluji refused on the score that it is customary throughout the world to welcome foreign representatives with pemp and ceremony only on first arrival and on finul departure Khakimoff on arrival has opened his heart to the Italian consul he is very bitter against His Majesty's Government, who, he says, have persistently sought to discredit the Soviet regime by the production and publication of faisified documents

15 Shipping statistics recently prepared for the Board of Trade show that 223 British ships visited Jeddah in 1927 as against 170 in 1926. The respective tennages for the two years were as follows:-

351,486 572,001 1927

The increase is due entirely to the increase in size of the pilgrimage, which resulted not only in the visits of more pilgrim ships but in increased imports

5. The King is convinced that the building of the Busaya post was an act of intentional provocation calculated to cause friction between himself and Famalud-Dowetsh.

6. The King views with disfavour the proposal conveyed through Hafez Walibs that the question of building should be referred to a commission of arbitration. He wishes the question to be settled as between himself and His Majesty's Government, and is confident that the latter well see the pustice of his contention.

7. He then draws the attention of His Majesty's Government to the very critical position in which he now stands. He is faced with one of two risks : either to smeace depropriates by force of arms, and the white of Nejd may be against him or by not doing so to find himself in conflict with His Majesty's Government-so alternative opposed both to his wishes and to the interests of Arabia.

8. He begs His Majorty a Government to find a solution to his difficulties by removing the present causes of friction, a definite cettlement must be arrived at, both se regards the building of posts and the harbouring by fraq of Nojdi raiders.

9. I discussed the King's letter very fully with the Director of Foreign Affairs before despatching my telegram under reference. I told Dr. Dambaji that I would certainly telegraph, but that I could not wire the letter in extense, first because I had already reported the Nejd point of view fully by despatch, and His Majesty's letter brought out no new points, and, secondly, because the communication which on your instruction I had addressed to the Saud was an answer to the King's request for your and I make the state of the sta the invitation to meet the Political Resident at Bushire. Colonel Haworth was entirely independent of Iraq and could have no anti-Nejd bias.

WE sent your Excellency on the 23rd December, 1927, a letter to forward to the British Government about the situation in Iraq and the Persian Gulf, and are still wants of for the reply through your Excellency.

2. We then received a warning with reference to cortain upsatisfactory acts committed by Ed Dowersh, like those which the Iraq and Transfordan Araba continue to commit in our territories, that the British Air Force in Iraq will attack peaceful

9. It was mentioned in the private conversation between Sheikh Hafez War la and his Excellency the High Commissioner for Iraq that the dispute concerning the 182961 buildings erected is to be referred to a commission of arbitration, but we do not wish this question to be solved otherwise than between ourselves and the British Government because our friendly relations with them make us believe that the just members of the British Government will see that we are right in our claim.

10. As to the critical position in which we now find ourselves, we believe that we owe it to the abereefs resulting in fraq and Transporden. Unless such questions are solved in a manner which will ensure the maintenance and fulfilment of our mutual oblightions, and unless agreement is reached concerning the guilty, we shall arrive at one of two ends which will be those the abereefs seek.

11. We cannot contemplate either end our do we like to do so. That is, if the situation remains the same, we shall have either to rise up and fight against all the people of Nejd to silence them as regards the present situation and sets of the Iraq Clovernment or to fall into a great dispute with the British Government.

12 Neither of these alternatives is in the present or future interests of the Arabs or the British Government. Both, as the British Government, the friend, will see, have bad results.

13. If the British Government wish to be our real friends, as we believe they do, and wish to have a powerful and faithful friend among the Arabs, who will maintain their interests as he does with his own and those of his people, they migh de vise some plan to rescue us from this critical position of complicated and entangled affairs.

14. We therefore await anxiously to receive the opinion of the British Government concerning both the buildings unnecessarily and unjustifiably erected and also those who ran away from punishment to the territories of the other party. We also tak their opinion as regards those officials of the Iraq Government who come in their cars to intrigue among the tribeamen.

15. We carnestly hope that the British Government will deal with this question in a spirit which will remove the cause of the dispute and get us out of the difficult position in which we now find ourselves.

and to expedite the reply as the situation is very critical.

With best respects.

MY telegram No. 102 and Bagdad telegram No. 110 to Colonial Office

Sheikh Hafez Wahba urges necessity of immediate action to save situation before it is too late. He points out that I'm Saud and he have urged repeatedly the danger of these desert fortifications and of aerial action against Nejd (see my private telegram of 9th January and my telegram No. 102). Now their warnings are being realised. It is absolutely necessary, Hafez Wahba argues, to give I'm Saud the moral [sie ! defensive] arms with which to restrain tribes, now thoroughly roused by Anglo-Iraqi action. Hafez Wahba anggested that Iraq Government should in the interest of peace between Nejd and Iraq demolish fort of Baswa and enter into negotiations with Ihn Saud. The latter's hand would be able to bring tribes to reason

2. It was pointed out to Hafez Wahba that this would be too much to ask of Iriq. He the eggested that Iriq stored his one limb and that it peace was restored in it was count iffected in zero to Mainria and in prestor well to destroyed. Hatez Wahba thinks this would be enough to restore Ibn Saud's authority over excited tribes.

3. I pass on Hafez Wahba's proposals without comments for your information (Repeated to Bagdad.)

tribes. Nejd tribesmen bave, according to Hafez Wahler, accused Ibn Sand of abetting British offensive against Nejd. He earnestly reiterates his previous suggestion, viz., that His Majesty's Government should give Ibn Saud a written assurance that if peace is restored and pumshment inflicted by him on the guilty the fort of Baswa will be demolished. An assurance would also be necessary that if Ibn Saud takes pointive action against tribesnen and any of them fly to Iraq or Knweit we will surrender fugitives to him With these two written assurances Hafoz Wahba thinks Ibn Saud could get tribesmen under control and chastise Feisal al Dawish and his followers

Hafez Wahba lays stress on urgency of action in the above sense. If long delayed

it may become impracticable

have not sufficient local data on which to judge whether the two above mentioned assurances would indeed enable Ibn Sand to recover control of tribes and punish the guilty, and I can only estimate situation as viewed from Cairo. But if there is a fair chance that such would be the result of these assurances I think they should be considered.

From telegram I have received from Resident Persian Gulf, it would appear that gravity of the situation has already decided His Majesty's Government to notify Ibn Saud of their intention to suspend air action which has so dangerously excited Nejd tribesmen. This concession would appear to be almost as great as that we assume or aller's anather of Base to reder it of tranquillity and punishment of guilty Jeddah Report for the Period February 1 to 29, 1928.

Dt ElNG the past month events on the Nojd-Iraq frontier have provoked long leading articles in each issue of the "Um-el-Qura." Jaafar Pasha's statement was commented on at length, and much resentment was felt at his remark that, diplomatic action having failed, recourse must be had to force and an expedition sent into Nejd 11, the "Lm-el-Qura" asserts, expeditions are to be sent against Nejd raiders, a similar right must be granted to Nejd to pursue and chastise Iraqi raiders in Iraq territory. It is admitted that Feisal ed Doweish acted unlawfully—a proclamation Enthat off it had a de I had been any come to Negar II was descripted. and would receive, puntabment in due course. If Ibn Saud had delayed sending an expedition against him, it was because he feared that, as had happened in the past, raiders fleering from punishment would be welcomed and harboured by Iraq Resentment is also felt at reports appearing in the Iraq press to the effect that Fetsal ed Doweish had revolted against 1bn Saud When, the writer asks, has it ever been stated that Iraq raiders into Nejd, of whom there have been many, had revolted against King Feisal! This statement is regarded as an attempt on the part of Iraq to sow dissension between Ibn Sand and his people. The dropping of warnings in Nejd territory and the bombing of innocent and harmless people had caused those who had hitherto regarded Fersal-ed-Dowersh's action with diagnot to accept his point of view

2. King Fersal's interview with Reuter's correspondent is commented upon at great both a the late of the Total Q in the king a med that the building of the Busaiyah post constituted a breach of the Ugair Protocol, first, because of its distance from the frontier, and, accoudly, because it is not a military but a police post. The "Um-el Qura" replies that there is accommodation for two officers and 140 soldiers. As regards the distance of the post from the frontier, no mention was made in the Uquir Protocol of distances. Busaiyah must have been understood to be one of the frontier wells as there are no others between Busaiyah

and Ansab

3 Ibn Saud has protested formally against the crossing of his frontiers by aeroplanes, against the dropping of proclamations in his territory and against the bombing of innocent persons. He states that such action is a breach of his sovereign independence and that he will have the greatest difficulty in restraining his subjects. who are smarting under this insult

10 The Dutch bacteriologist, to whom reference has been made in previous reports, ambraced Islam this month. He had hoped that permission to visit Mecca. would be immediately forthcoming. Opposition by Syrian doctors in Mecca was, however, so strong that the Government have informed him that he must undergo a year's probation, after which time he will be allowed to reside in Mecca if he so wishes. As the King could not have been consulted, Dr. Van der Hoog has written through his consul to Rivadh, and has left the country, to return only if the King a answer is favourable.

11. Ibrahim Dupui, the acting French consul, has left Jeddah on sick leave He was latterly quite unlit to perform his functions. He wearied his colleagues with highly coloured accounts of the condition of his entrails. After inducing the Italian consul to wire to his Government for the information of Paris that the state of his health was critical and that he must leave immediately, he delayed his departure many days after his leave was granted in the vain endeavour to marry the young daughter of a Jeddah notable. He already had one native lady with him on

departure

Destination of cars is now known to have been Hanakiya, 60 miles north-east of Median, where posture land is reserved for Ibn Sand's camels. It is reported that tribesmen of the neighbourhood unable to find pasturage for their camels, were trespassing on the Royal preserve. Resistance was offered by The Saud's men, and in resulting struggle several of the latter were killed. Emir of Median on receiving the news requisitioned eighteen cars and despatched men to the scene. Rumours of disturbances in Kheibar are not confirmed

Mr. Wingfield also added some verbal expenses as the outstant assessment of the expected office from allowing Ibn Saud to believe that the Imam Yabia was receiving encouragement and arms from Italy, whilst he himself could expect no support from His Majesty's Government, with the result that he might be inclined to accept Bolshevik offers of assistance, or from any successful efforts by the Imam Yahu to alter to his advantage the existing situation in Asir, thus facing the Saud with the alternatives of accepting the subversion of his position there or of making war to preserve it, either of which alternative would react in a most undesirable manuer on Anglo-Italian relations.

2 Signor Guarigha replied that he would answer my note in writing, but that he could say at once that instructions would be sent to the effect that Ibn Saud should be reassured with regard to Italian policy. It was the latter's fault if no treaty had been concluded between him and Italy, as he had insisted on his sugarainty over Asir being specifically recognised, which was of course impossible, since the Imain Yahia would consider such recognition a most unfriendly act on the part of Italy. The Italian Government had, however, done all that was possible to restrain the Imani Yahis from taking any action against the Government of the Hejaz, and, so far as he, 29

Jeddak Report for the period March 1 to 31, 1928.

The month under review, corresponding as it did with the fast of Ramadin, and abroad, of wild rumours. The news appearing in the foreign press that I in Sound had proplymed a find, were an isst the heretical it frag. I have and is well as it mediately desired. Local fulliours of the even wilder nature were current Ameng he most fantestic were the news that Bin Sand had lost control of all tribes in Nejd and was abdicating in favour of his brother Mohammed. This story was capped by news of the presence within 100 miles of Medina of a large HA . It was the state of whom 11 1 cm , 41, 12 - 11 - 11 engines had been clearly nearo in the ingul-

and men and munitions rushed to the scene

2 While Ramadan is largely to blame for the spreading of these rumours, authorities in Mecca must also bear their share of responsibility. It was not until inaccurate news of an incident at Wejh had been allowed to circulate for several days that the authorities in Mecca thought fit to offer an explanation, and then one containing only half truths. The incident first came to the notice of the agency through the Khedivial agents, who reported that shots had been fired across the bows of the steamship "Mansourah." to warn her not to put in at Wejh. The Mecca Foreign Office reported that the question was one of no importance, that it was the result of a family quarrel and a misunderstanding between Hamid Rif in of the Belki tribe and his cousin, the Amir of Wejh. The later and in the be gathered, the true explanation, was that Hamid Rifada, who up till ten mouths ago had been living in Transjordan, had returned to the Hejaz. He had received a poor welcome and unable to find means of subsistence, had taken to brigandage with a number of followers. He had finally attacked Wejh and, though driven out of the town, had occupied certain of the wells on the outskirts. His action seems to have encouraged other turbulent spirits. A force was eventually desputched under Ibn Aqil, ex-Amir of Jauf, and, according to official information, the disturbance has been completely quelled

3 News of the requisitioning of cars was confirmed, though the number was only eighteen. It was thought at first that this despatch of troops was connected with the Weik incident, or, possibly, that rumours of trouble in the Klaubar district were well founded. It is now reported on good authority that the destination of the cars was Khanakiya (about 60 miles north east of Medina) where the grazing ground is set apart for the King's camels. It appears that the tribesmen of the trespassed on the Royal preserve. A fight our and, which resulted in the killing of n number of 1bn Sand men. The Emir of Medina requisitioned cars, and hurried

5. During the past month the Mecca press has shed no new lights on the situation. Leading articles in the first issues were devoted to recapitulating the points of transgression of various agreements by Iraq and Transpordan, insistence on the oft-repeated accusation of the harbouring by those countries of fugitive criminals and assurances that the King had only refrained from taking drastic nction against the raiders lest they should take refuge in Iraq. In the last issue the transgressions of Iraq and Transjordan are passed over more lightly, the King's regret at the action of the raiders is insisted on and sorrow is expressed at the action of the press abroad in publishing false news of events and in misinterpreting the Aide-memoire from the Ministry for Foreign Affairs.

In reply to aide-mémoire of the 27th March last, the Royal Ministry for Foreign Affairs have the honour to bring the following to the notice of His Britannic Majorty's Embassy:-

1. No secret agreement exists between Italy and the Yemen.

2. It is correct that the Royal Government have made the recognition of Ibn Saud as King of the Hejaz contingent upon assurances of peaceful intentions on the part of the latter with regard to his relations with the Imani Yahis, and on the exclusion of such recognition in respect of Asir, as they consider that this question should be left in abeyange for the present.

The attitude adopted by the Royal Government is in complete agreement with the understandings arrived at with His Britainic Majesty's Government on the subject of the policy to be pursued in Ambia and with regard to Asir, concerning which the Royal Government has requested the Britannic Majesty's Government not to make any decision which nught give rise to reactions on the part of the limin.

3. The reports continued in the latter handed by Sheikh Hafiz Wabba to the British High Commissioner in Egypt, to the effect that the present state of mind of I'm Soud might be seized upon as a propinous moment for the furtherance of the designs—hitherto opposed by Ibn Sand -of Bolshevik agents upon the Hejaz, would appear to be a means of pressure tuther than anything else

4. The Royal Government has furnished proofs of its complete goodwill as regards the recognition of the Saud as King of the Hejaz, and regrets most sincerely that the negotiations and not reach a conclusion through the fault of 1bn Sand himself. who, while not accepting the suggestions of the Royal Government, has also given to feel and a support of the contraction neighbours. The attitude of the Royal Government towards Iba Saud has always been friendly, as he has repeatedly recognized by asking for closer relations between Italy and the Hejaz. It might be expedient to mention, a propos of this, that it was largely due to the intervention of Italy with the Imam Yahia that the latter stopped his troops on the line of Medi when the occupation of Asir would not have been very difficult for him. Equally so, it is due to Italian intervention that a mission from the lineau is at this moment in Mecca with the object of continuing pesceful negotiations to solve the problems existing between the two Sovereigns - including that of Asic

5 The Royal Government would have no difficulty in reopening the negotiations with Ibn Saud for his recognition as King of the Hejaz subject to the conditions laid down in paragraph 2

6. Italian actions in the New Advantage as been dead to the results with we district a sure of the section of alsonie train a resident for restaurant to the second to a vest on 1 or contitue paterna an opportunity for the re-Imam regarding the protes for the transfer of the presenterate

7. Italian action, which is also to the advantage of British interests, cannot, he a ver have any esher pres 1 | here the momentalise of going remitting between listy and the Yemen. Therefore it seems evidently opportune, in accordance with the Rome understanding, to proceed with the utmost caution in dealing with this delicate question.

Descring Street, April 17, 1928. f AM directed by Mr. Sanday Amery to acade alonge the receipt of your letter of the 10th April notifying your acceptance of the appointment of special Beitish representative for the propose of the fitter is settlement of outstanding questions with His Majesty King Ibn Saud. It is not the desire of His Majesty's Government to limit your discretion in regard to the manner in which the results descred by His Majesty's Government should be attained, but for your guidance, and in order to assist you in the negotiations, it is thought desirable to communicate to you the f flowing irf re t to a translated of the which have her essented your mission and to state the policy of His Majesty's Government in regard to the matters which will form the subject of your conversations with His Majesty King Ibn Sand

2 The primary object of your mission will be to discuss the present critical situation between Iraq and Nejd, which has arisen as a result of a series of raids into Iraq and Koweit territory by certain Akhwan elements, and to attempt in conversation with His Majesty to liquidate this situation in such a manner as will prevent further raids of this nature upon territories with which His Majesty's Government are in treaty relations. To assist you in this part of your mission, it is proposed that Mr K Cornwallis, C M G , C B E D S O , the adviser to the Ministry of Interior, Iraq, should accompany you. He will be fully acquainted with the details of these raids the casualties inflicted, the loss of live-stock and property occasioned, and the claims for reparation therefor to be presented by the Iraq Government. He will also be in a position to advise you in regard to the tribal sit at on on the Iraq Nejd frontier. It is also proposed that Mr. R. H. Bourd Ilon.

C M G, the counsellor to the High Commissioner for Iraq, should fly to Egypt to consult with you in regard to the conduct of this part of your moss

Por your information in regard to this aspect of your enclose a copy of a memorandum prepared in the Foreign Office sure that the complete sure of the Majesty's Government concerned I am also to enclose copies of statements furnished by the High Commissioner for Iraq continuous in a parallel column the action taken thereon and the replies to the complaints made in His Majesty's letters. A more complete set of correspondence with King Ibn Saud, as affecting Iraq and Transpordan, will doubtless be communicated to you by those Governments and in so far as it has passed through Jeddah, by the British agent and consult at that port. Although these documents set out in full the circumstances leading up to the present situation, it might be of advant as to furnish you with a brief account of the principal events which have led to the recent crisis in the relations between His Majesty's Government and the King of Nejd

4. In September of last year King Ibn Saud addressed to the High Commissioner for Iraq a protest against the establishment by the Iraq Government of certain advanced police posts. The post to which His Majesty took principal exception was one at Busaivah, then in course of construction, which provided accommodation for some fifteen police. The post was situated at a distance of some 75 miles from the nearest point on the Iraq Nejd frontier. In his letter, His Majesty represented that the construction of this post was contrary to the provisions of article 3 of the Ugair Protocol of the 2nd December, 1922, which reads as follows:—

"The two Governments mutually agree not to use the watering places and wells situated in the vicinity of the border for any military purpose, such as building forts on them, and not to concentrate troops in their vicinity."

Some three weeks later King Ibn Sand followed up this letter with a further protect At this point it should be explained that the construction of the Busaiyah post and similar police posts at other places equally far distant from the frontier was under taken by the Iraq Government in response to a previous complaint by King Ibn Sand that the Iraq Government were permitting the refugee Shammar tribe to raid into Nejd territory through the narrow corridor connecting Iraq and Transpordan. The Iraq Government hoped by the establishment of these advanced police posts to obtain early information of such raids, and thus, even if numble to prevent them occurring at least to intercept the raiders on their return and inflict salutary punishment

5 In the latter part of October the High Commissioner replied to King Ibn Sand, pointing out that there was no foundation for the charge that the establishment of the Busaryah post was a contravention of the Ugair Protocol, and sending photographs and details of the post to demonstrate that, quite apart from the fact that it could not be described as "in the vicinity of the border" (it is, in fact, the same distance from the Nord frontier as the fortified post at Ruthah, on the transdesert air and motor route), its small size and limited garrison rendered any description of it as "a fort" misleading. On the 5th November, while this correspondence was in progress, a party of Mutair raided the Busaiyah post and slaughtered its occupants, including, in addition to the garrison of six police, an strightion official, twelve cooler and an Iraqi woman. After this raid there followed in quick succession a number of further taids by Mutair tribesmen upon Iraq tribes These raids were characterised by the atmost savagery. Strongly-worded protests were sent to King Ibn Sand, but these produced equivocal replies, which, while admitting that in carrying out these raids the leader of the Mutair, Sheikh has alleged believe to a most fit Mass something represented that the fault really lay with the Iraq Government in constructing the police post, and that if the police post were abandoned the raids would cease. It became increasingly obvious that the Mutair tribe had definitely thrown off King Ibn Saud's authority and were no longer under his effective control; and this view was apparently substantiated by a warning which His Majesty conveyed to the Resident in the Persian Gulf, to the effect that a large force of Akhwan were marching north conteary to his orders. In these circumstances, His Majesty's Government decided that there could no longer be any objection to the Royal Air Force in Iraq being post and similar police posts is a contravention of the Ugair Protocol, and has continued to press for its abolition as providing the only solution of the present trouble. To this His Majesty has lately added a further condition, namely, that those responsible for bombing his territory should be punished. As an example of the general tenor of King Ibn Saud's recent letters, I am to enclose a translation of a letter from His Majesty dated the 5th March. The comments of the High Commissioner for Iraq upon this letter will be found in his telegram No. 168 of the 19th March, to which reference has been made in paragraph 7 above

10. His Majesty's Government are not prepared to admit that the Iraq Government, in constructing these posts, acted otherwise than in full accord with their treaty obligations, nor are they prepared to agree to the demolition of any of these posts. It should be realised that the interest of His Majesty's Government in the maintenance of these posts does not arise solely out of their responsibility for the defence of Iraq. It is of the utmost importance for His Majesty's Government to ensure the preservation of the authority of the Iraq Government in the corridor connecting Iraq and Transpordan. If Akhwan influence were allowed to penetrate into this area, the projects of a pipe-line and a rathway from Haifa to Bagdad, to which His Majesty's Government attach considerable importance, would become impracticable. The only apparent means of securing the maintenance of I authority in this area is by a chain of posts such as those which have been established by the Iraq Government, and to which King Ibn Saud takes such a strong exception You will see, therefore, that imperial as well as local issues are involved Consequently, a solution on the lines proposed by King Ibn Saud is unacceptable, and it remains to consider what other measures can be taken in order to provide a satisfactory settlement of the matters in dispute, and one which will offer good prospects of the cessation of further raiding and the establishment of settled conditions on the Iraq Negd frontier self and King Ibn Saud will go far to convince His Majesty (if indeed, he is not already convinced) that his protests against the establishment of the Busaiyah post were unjustified and that in this matter the action of the Iraq Government has been King Ibn Saud's own position each richis tribes cannot be ignored. No settlement can be considered satisfactory which involves any scrious and apparent loss of prestige on his part and therefore tends to weaken his control over his subjects. In short, some arrangement should be arrived at which, without involving may admission of fault on the part of the Iraq Government or of His Majesty's Government, will serve to mitigate His Majesty's difficulties.

11. The dispute, estembly at least, has arisen owing to a difference of inter-Protocol. In the interests of both parties it is essential that some means should be religible to the little of the plant of the art of the pass ofty of further dispute by the adoption of an accepted definition. It has been suggested that these words should be defined as meaning within a distance of, say 25 miles from the frontier. Alternatively, it has been suggested that, instead of a definition based upon distance from the frontier, the wells on each side of the frontier, the fortification of which is prohibited, should be specifically enumerated. The Iraq Government have agreed in principle to the latter suggestion, but consider that difficulties may arise owing to the lack of exhaustive information on the subject Mr. Cornwallis will, however, be furnished with a map allowing the position of such wells as are known to exist. His Majesty's Government consider that a definition on the basis of one or other of the above alternatives should, if possible, be adopted. but they are content to leave you to decide, in the light of your conversations with King Ibn Saud and in consultation with Mr. Cornwallis, the precise terms of the definition to be adopted.

12. In a letter dated the 25th January and addressed to His Majesty's agent and consul at Jeddah, King Ibn Saud stated that, in deference to the stipulations of article 3 of the Uquir Protocol he had forbidden his tribes to build a fortified post at Linah, which is situated more than 30 miles from the Iraq frontier. It seems possible that, by encouraging His Majesty to exercise his undoubted right to exercise his undoubted right to exercise his independent of Nejdi posts outside the prohibited zone on his side of the frontier, the reciprocal nature of the arrangement would be made evident and any appearance of surrender on the part of His Majesty would be removed. With the same object in view, the Iraq Government have suggested that His Majesty might be the trivial to a per the act. The trivial to the manned by Nejdi and Iraqi contingents in the neutral zone. You will doubtless just forward these suggestions, if you consider them likely to be acceptable to King Iba Saud, when a favourable opportunity occurs

In the unlikely event of king Ibn Saud proving wholly intractable and your failing to move him by argument, you may, if you see fit, indicate to him in such manner as you may deem appropriate that, unless some satisfactory settlement is reached which will ensure peaceful conditions on the frontiers of Iraq and Kowoit His Majesty « Government may be compelled to bring further pressure to locar upon the guilty tribes either directly or indirectly through the medium of a blockade of the Persian Gulf Ports. In this connexion I am to enclose copies of telegrams from which it appears that King Ibn Saud is fully alive to the latter possibility and is anxious to avoid it.

If it becomes evident that there can be no satisfactory outcome from your conversations with His Majesty and that their continuance would serve no useful purpose, you should report accordingly to His Majesty's Government and await instructions, in the meantime suspending discussions. It is not the wish of His Majesty's Government that the negotiations should be definitely broken off while there remains any prospect of a successful usue or without prior reference to London

13. Me Cornwallie will be in a position to furnish you with details of the claims of the Iraq Government to reparation for the recent Akhwan raids. You should endeavour to obtain from King Ibn Saud an undertaking to satisfy these light of the light of the light of the claims, and for the punishment of his guilty tribesmen would not be acceptable.

In a letter a copy of which is enclosed t dated the 6th December addressed to His Majesty's High Commissioner for Egypt and presented by Sheikh Hafez Wahba His Majesty suggested that a special emissary should visit him to discuss certain matters of mutual concern to himself and the British Government. As you will see, the three questions in his opinion calling for discussion were—

(I) Italy's new position in Arabia.

(2) The position of the Shercefish rulers of Iraq and Transjordan, and

(3) The position of Rolshevika in Arabia and their conflict with British economic interests of these questions the second, which really concerns the traditional hostality between King Ibo Saud and the present rulers of Iroq and Transportan will doubtless be raised by King Ibo Saud in the course of your discussions regarding the attraction in the Iraq and Ibo Saud in the course of your discussions regarding the attraction in the Iraq and Ibo Saud in the course of your discussions regarding the attraction in the Iraq and Ibo Saud in the Ibo Saud in the Iraq and Ibo Saud in the Ibo Saud in the Iraq and Ibo Saud in the Ibo Saud in th

16. As regards the third question mentioned in King Ibn Saud's letter. I leave it to your discretion, if a suitable opportunity presents itself, to point out to His Majesty the ill effects upon the pilgrimage and consequently upon the Hejaz I xchequer if the Bolshevik activities in the Hejaz are permitted to increase. You may assure His Majesty that if he will take the matter in hand His Majesty's Government will be glad to co-operate with him by giving him all the information that may reach them as to the presence of known Bolshevik agents or persons of pronounced Bolshevik views proceeding to the Hojaz under the guise of pilgrims.

17. As you are aware certain points raised by King Ibn Saud in the course of the conversations, which you conducted with him in the summer of 1927 in connexion with the negotiation of the Treaty of Jeddah were left over for subsequent settlement, and it is desirable that you should know what action has been taken in regard to these matters by His Majesty's Government in the interval.

In paragraph 22 of your despatch of the 6th June, 1927, you reported to the Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs that King Ibn Saud had raised the question of the restoration of the Hejaz Railway You then informed him that His Majesty's Government were discussing the matter with the French Government, His Majesty and I to be be at experience I be to exact the organis or a fitte that the presumed that he would be given the opportunity of nominating a representative to attend the conference, which would be held with a view to arranging a final

In June last the French Government suggested that a conference of local experts should be held at Haifa, but that the activities of the conference should be limited to the discussion of technical questions. In August, His Majesty's Government King Ion Saud accordingly, and requesting him to nominate a representative to uttend the conference at Haifa. Though their attention was on several occasions called to the matter, the French Government did not signify their acceptance of the proposals made by His Majesty's Government until the 23rd December last On the 20th December the British consul, at Jeddah, was instructed to concert with his French colleague in informing King Ibn Saud that His Majesty's Government ed by I a b Grove and reposed that a fine is a bound experts from Palestine. Transjordan, Syria and the Hejaz should be held at Haifa to consider questions relating to the restoration of the Hejaz section of the railway. The Hejaz Government have accepted this proposal but, at their request, the conference has been postponed until the first days of July

18. As regards the question of capitulations, which was also under discussion in connexion with the negotiations of the Treaty of Jeddah, the attitude of His M esty's Government remains that they no longer claim capitulatory rights in King Ibn Saud's territory, but do not intend to make any formal statement to that effect. A copy of a despatch addressed to His Majosty's acting consul at Jeddah on this subject is enclosed *

19 A copy is also enclosed of a despatch to His Majesty's acting-consul at Jeddah on the subject of the Haramain Wakfa. You will see that His Majesty's Government cannot give any general promise of assistance to King Ibn Saud in the matter of Haramain Wakis, but that subject to this reservation, they will, in this matter as in others, always be ready to consider sympathetically any request addressed to Mr Jakins, His Majesty's Government are unable to comply with the specific requests made by King Ibn Saud to you

20. In your despatch of the 9th June to the Secretary of State for Form in Affairs you reported that King Iba Saud entered into detail in regard to the particular case of the tribunals for the settlement of claims on account of raids, with specifice to Tries add and that He Messe also dall as regards 1 . . . is, he would be willing to accept the award of an arbiter, provided that i British officer was appointed. His Majesty also suggested, to facilitate speedy settlement in the future, the appointment of a British officer, experienced in Arab habits and sustoms, whose duty it would be to keep a constant watch over tribul affairs, and who would be the recipient of all details and information regarding entds as and when they took place.

21. In September last His Majesty was informed that His Majesty's Govern-Application of the same of the growing of the statement to be the transfer to watch over tribal affairs on the Nejd Transjordan frontier, and that they proposed Majesty's Government proposed to entrust these duties to Mr. A. S. Kirkbride, the first assistant to the British Resident in Transpordan. King Ibn Saud agreed to accept the findings of a British arbitrator, but he made it clear that he would not agree to the appointment of any person connected with the Governments of Palestine, Franspordan or Iraq, either as an arbitrator on claims arising out of past raids or as the recipient of details and information regarding future raids. After further consideration His Majesty's Government decided in December last (1) to inform King 1bn Sand that, if he agreed that one half the cost of the appointment would be borne by the Government of Nejd, they would forthwith appoint as arbitrator on claims arising out of past raids an officer unconnected with the Governments of Palestine, Transjordan or Iraq, and (2) to suggest to His Majesty that he should discuss with the other so appointed the best means of providing machinery for the settlement of any future disputes. As His Majesty was then on the Arabian coast of the Persian Gulf and as it seemed desirable that the matter should be discussed with him orally it was decided to defer further negotiations until he returned to

22. His Majesty has now reopened the question. You should inform him that His Majesty's Government are prepared to appoint a British officer to arbitrate undertake to select for this appointment an officer who has no connexion with the administrations of Palestine, Transfordan or Iraq You should also inform His Majesty that in the view of His Majesty's Government this officer should adjudicate upon claims in respect of raids as far back as the date of the occupation of Janf I ransjordan against Nejd or by Nejd against Transjordan, should be dealt with by him. If King Ibn Saud agrees to these proposals, His Majesty's Government will appoint an officer to arbitrate upon the claims as soon as possible

23. As regards the proposal that an officer should be appointed to deal with future disputes, there are practical difficulties in adopting this suggestion, since that officer would owe allegiance to no local authority and could have no very clear or definite status. A further consideration is that it is most unlikely that the duties of receiving information about, and dealing with, tribal questions on the Nejd Transpordan frontier would occupy the full time and services of an officer. You abould therefore explain to King Ibn Saud the difficulties which lie in the way of the appointment of a whole-time officer for this purpose

24. Failing the use of the tribunals provided for in the Hadda Agreement, the alternatives appear to be of the que nament to special artistic as its when need arises, or (2) the appointment by the Governments of Transjordan and Nejd of frontier officers from both sides, who would meet from time to time and deal on the spot with such affection is a street at the ratter of superfect to a vice were adopted, it might be desirable, having regard to the possibility of a complete tending be ween the two firsters bers to provide be to any or terest. them, any matter in dispute should be referred to a British officer unconnected with any of the local administrations. His Majesty a Government are content to leave it to you to decide (1) how far, if at all, King Ibn Sand should be pressed to agree that future disputes and claims should be brought before the tribunals provided for in the Hadda Agreement, and (2) failing agreement on this point, which of the alternstive arrangements mentioned above should be adopted

Colonial Office to Sir G. Clayton

Downing Street, April 17, 1925

I AM directed by Mr. Secretary Amery to refer to the letter from this Depart ment of the 17th April, conveying to you the instructions of His Majesty's Government in regard to your proposed mission to negotiate a settlement of outstanding questions with His Majesty King Ibn Saud I am to explain that there are two further points which may be raised in the course of your conversations with Ibn Saud, and which, as being of a subsidiary character, were not included in your efficial instructions

2. The first of these points relates to a recent attack upon sections of the Beni Sakhr tribes within King ibn Saud's territory. In February last the High Commisstoner for Transjordan reported that a large force of Wahabis, led by Farhan Ibn Mashour, attacked certain sections of the Beni Sakhr tribes while they were on grazing grounds in Nejd territory, north east of Jauf. The sheikh of the Zeni section and his son, with about 100 other tribesmen, were killed, the survivors being carried off to Japa.

This report was forwarded to His Majesty King Ibn Saud with a request that he would enquire into the circumstances and effectively punish the guilty parties Hadding larget as heading assembly as he had between by you party of the Rawala who emigrated from Syria two years ago; that his Amir at Jabal has arrested the ermanals, who will be punished, that certain of the Beni Sakhr who suffered have arrived at Jauf, and that the Amir at Hail is enquiring into the matter and will recover the stolen property.

You should inform His Majesty that His Majesty's Covernment ment appreciate his assurances, and hope that he will effect a acttlement by which the line Sakhr tribesmen will be fully compensated for the damages and looses which they maye suffered

3. In regard to the second point, which relates to air matters in which King In Saud and Ibs Majesty's Government are mutually interested . . . to you copies of two memoranda which had been prepared in the Air Minister. These memoranda explain the position as it exists to day and the wishes of His Majesty a Government for the fature. It is the desire of His Majesty's Government. that, if a satisfactory settlement is reached in regard to the main object of your mission, namely, the situation existing on the Nejd Iraq frontier, and if a simulate opportunity presents itself, and if you are satisfied that the general atmosphere in favourable, you should docuss with His Majesty both the question of a possible air route along the south west count of the Persona Gulf and also the question of the appear the say of a life or a confidence of an order the say a war air service. You will observe that His Majesty a permission has already been sought for a recommusance party to visit the coast of Hasa in order to select suitable landing sites for possible use in connexion with the projected air route to India. His Majesty has so far felt unable to grant the desired permission, and it is hoped that, if the advantages of the establishment of an air service along the Arabian littoral of the Personn Gulf are explained to King Ibn Saud, his concurrence in the visit of a prebminary reconnaiseance party may be obtained. If therefore, you are satisfied that there are good prospects of success, you should raise the matter with him and term Plant tone on above a glad speak the star this Majesty's Government in regard to the supply of British pilots and mechanics

The subject should not, however, be broached unless your negotiations in regard to the situation on the Nejd Iraq frontier reach a successful conclusion. It is important that in the conduct of your mission no action should be taken which might give colour to the view that the interests of the Iraq Government have in any way seen subordinated to those of His Majesty's Government tt 1) .. . K ig has good and sufficient reasons of his own for so ucting.

3. In the first place, as I had the honour to state in my immediately preceding despatch, the natural market for the Hejaz is British India. Hejaz merchants, who, largely owing to their readmess to replemen at need the depleted coffers of His Majesty exercise considerable influence, have in most cases their head offices in Bombay. They have, therefore, everything to lose by a deversion of commercial traffic from India to any other country. The attempt of the Soviet to introduce commodities such as flour and augar at prices competing with those quoted for Indian imports met with the stoutest opposition on the part of local merchants. The position of the latter was greatly strengthened by the fact that the most important of their number is also the Governor of Jeddah.

4. A second reason why Ibn Saud must at all costs prevent the dissemination of Bolshevik propagands in the flejax is the four that pilgrums may be contaminated. It may appear at first glauce that this danger is one to course alarm to the Governments of India, the Dutch East Indies, Malaya and Egypt rather than to Ibn Saud himself. The suspicion, however, that pilgrims were imbibing in the Hejaz the poison of communistic doctrines would be quite sufficient to justify the Governments affected in withdrawing from the pilgrimage their special anaction and support. I have continually arged this consideration on the Hejax Minister for Foreign Affairs and the King is, I am only the prosperity but the very existence of the Hejaz depends on the pilgromage.

5. As I had the honour to state in my last Jeddah report, the Soviet representative does not hade his disappointment at the meagre results obtained by his agen y during their four years' stay in the Hejnz. The open attempts to influence Ibn Saud in which Khakimoff appears to have indulged on his first appointment here met, I gather from the reports of my predecessors, with definite snuls. The Soviet's Intest endeavour to gain favour and influence by the introduction and distribution of cheap

My Italian colleague is fully convinced; he has, indeed, proof that Ahmed Senussi is in correspondence with the Soviet agency. Though he is unaware of the subject matter of the correspondence, he suspects that the Senuesi is seeking pecuniary assistance to carry out his plan of return to his country

Arab Personalities

hear Saud ibn Abd-el-Acie ibn Soud

SECOND surviving son of 1be Saud and his heir apparent. Governor of Nojd, which he marphy leaving to the state of the last to be made to the property Hejaz and Nejd. Apparently a man of prepossessing appearance and strong character. (April 1928.)

Emir Fernal ihn Abd-ol-Azir ibn Saud.

aged ? The arrange on the we have been you the Hejez Visited England in 1917 and 1926. Has not justified early hopes. His appearance bears out the current report that most of his time is devoted to the ladies of his household rather than to his official duties; he has recently earned the contemptatous nickname. of "bint." As Viceroy he has made no mark, and his chief official preoccupation seems to be in keeping his masterful and ambittous tutor. Hatiz Wabbs, the assistant Vicercy, at arm's length. Is friendly with Mr. Philby, whom he met in Nejd in 1917 18 as a young boy. (April 1928.)

Abdulla Dambuja

Minister for Foreign Affairs. Formerly called Abdulla Said Effendi. A native of Mosul, he became a student in the Turkish Medical College at Constantinople, and is said to have stayed in Paris for a time. Styles himself "doctor," but is reported not to have completed his studies before being expelled for unnatural vices, which are commonly considered to remain with him. He seems to have been serving in the Turkish army when Ibn Saud took Hosa in 1913, when he transferred his allegiance to the King. He was appointed to his present position on the fall of Jeddah. He attended the Uquir Conference in 1932 and signed the protocol as 1bn Saud's representative. Took part in the negotiations leading to aignature of the Treaty of Jeddah in 1927. He is on closest terms of intimacy with Mr. Philby, whom he met and accompanied in 1917, and whom there is reason to believe he consults on most questions of foreign policy. He is, moreover, in close business relations with Philby, for whose firm (Sharqieh, Limited) he has obtained certain Government contracts with large pecuniary benefit to himself. He is thoroughly mercenary. In 1926 he accompanied the Emir Feissl to Lundon and brought back an increased delight in strong drink and cards. He is unpopular in Mecca, especially with stricter Moslems. He speaks French and a little English; has pleasant manners and appearance and generally a European outlook, he can thus claim to be considered the best available man for his post. He exercises little independent authority in the absence of the King, and the latter when in the Hejaz is his own Foreign Minister. Is Anglophile in would be more actively so if freed from the influence of his associate 1

Fund Hamza.

Assistant to Dr. Damluji. This young Syrian was educated at the Beirut Mission College and has a fair knowledge of English. He came to the Hejaz towards the end of 1926. He first gave English lessons to sons of Inchan merchants residing in Mecca, and then secured an appointment in the Foreign Office through his compatrict Yusef Yassin, who was acting Foreign Minister in the absonce of Dr. Damluji. He apes the strict Wahabi and scarcely conceals his contempt for his chief. During the negotiations which preceded the conclusion of the Treaty of Jeddah he supported the obstructions of Yusef Yassin. (April 1928.)

Hafir Wahba.

Assistant Viceroy of the Hejaz. An Egyptian who maintains the closest relations with the Egyptian consul in Jeddah and travels on an Egyptian passport. Educated at El Azhar, he took an active part in the pan-Islamic movement. Was strongly and the last the stable of the stable opened a school. Followed 1bn Sand to Rayadh and in the subsequent Hejax campaign. After the fall of Jeddah he became sole administrator of Mecca. In the hasto could be have by a the by grill the a W som of the King's counsellors during the negotiations at Bahra in 1925 and at Jeddah in 1927. He incurred royal displeasure late in 1927 owing to an incident in connexion with the negotiations regarding the Egyptian "Mahmal." His nomination to represent Ibn Saud at the abortive Koweit Conference of 1927 was generally accepted to be a device for his temporary removal from the Hejas. His practice as Assistant Vicercy of working independently and without instructions has caused him to be cordially detected by the Emir Feisal. (April 1928.)

Abdulla Fadt

Native of Qasim (Amaza) and formerly subject of Thu Rashid. Became Jeddah manager of Ibu Sand's favourite business house of Mossis. Ibrahim Mohammed Salihel Fudl, of Bombay and Karachi. Roudered many services to Ibn Saud, for which he suffered imprisonment at the hands of King Hussein. Earned Ibn Saud's gratitude, but was for long the butt of all cheap local wit. Was present at the discussions preceding conclusion of the Treaty of Jeddah. Was appointed Ibn Saud's delegate for the discussions on the subject of the Italian recognition of Ibn Saud, and proceeded to Asmara, where he achieved conspicuous unsuccess. His appointment as Acting Assistant Vicercy of the Hejaz in November 1927, in the absence of Hanz Wahba, seems to have brightened up his wits and his appearance. (April 1928.)

Mohammed Abd er Rahman-el-Fadl.

Half-brother of Audulla from whom he took over the management of the Jeddali branch of Messex. Ibrahun Mohammed Salih-el-Fadl. A simple man with no apparent interest to politics. Has some influence with Ibn Saud. (April 1928.)

47

Hays Zesnal Als Rena.

Elder half-brother of the Kaimakam of Jeddah. Came to the Hejaz as a domestic servant in a Persian household and peddled his way into commerce. As a member of one of the wealthrest houses in Jeridah he suffered considerably under King Hussein's practice of ruising forced loans. Is over 75 years of age and rapidly breaking up, a process accelerated by the death in Constantinople in 1927 of his son Kasam. 1.15 son Yusef manages the Bombay branch of the business, the Jeddah direction of which is now in the hands of the Kaimakam. The other aurriving son, Mohammed Ali, is a prominent pearl merchant in Bombay where he is a member of the Haj Committee. This son also gives monetary support to a school in Mecca and one in Jeddah (Mudrasset-el-Fulal). (April 1928.)

Abdulla Ali Resa.

Kaimakam of Jeddah. Followed his half-brother Haji Zemal to the Hojas and h had been to be, let up the present to the little of the post of the years in the first of the linji Zemal business. Appointed Kaimakam of Jeddah under King Hussem and has held the post ever since. Probably the richest man in Jeddah. Agent for the Bombay and Persia Steam Navigation Company (Limited) and the Oriental Navigation Company (Limited). Has been known to use his official authority to further his commercial interests but sujoys the almost unique distinction of being incorruptible. A man of sterling qualities and deservedly general popularity. (April 1928.)

Volument Husein Nat 1.

Grandson of Omer Anni of Egyptian origin who came to Jeddah to work as a coolie, advanced in position under the Turks and obtained a post in the Sultan's have 1, 18 a Comp trought before to the part to become the richest property owner in Joddali. Mohammed Husein Nasid has some reputation as an Arabic scholar, and claims to have the only library in Jeddah. He is an ardent Wahabi, thus incurring the currity of the ex-King Hussien, who did not heartate to exact frequent loans from him. He houses Ibn Saud when the latter comes to Jeddah le said to be untrustworthy and for that reason to have been given ne office, but has a fine air of mingled wisdom and benevolence. (April 1928.)

Sulcimon Amon Gabil.

Takes his name from the now extinct Jeddah Gabil family who emancipated his father a slave of Mass. 6 Market with a father of Mass. Made Renard Beledia, a minor and paid appointment, under the Turkish regime, and continued to hold that office under the ex-King Hussein, with whom he was a great favourite. He made hay while the sun shone, and is now probably the third richest man in Jeddah. Agent for the Shusturi Line. Managing director of the Shirket-es-Saudia, the pilgrim motor transport company mangurated by 1bn Saud. A lively and entertaining bost. (April 1928.)

Abd-el Quder Gabil.

Younger brother of Suleman Galul, by whom he is completely outshone. A quiet charming man with a boyish face. He helps in his brother's business, and is credited with no political interest.

Sulesman Shefiq Pasha

Formerly Turkish Military Governor of Basra, from which post he was withdrawn the offer kelde Great Wir Booms Mater War of Boar Ford Pas als when I am a mar fee a Manage about a stor to the deax carry in 1220, and acted as chief organiser of the Islamic Conference that year. Appointed Inspectorieneral of Government Offices, but met with some opposition in this office, so became chief engineer of the Jeddah Mecra road. Of the latter he has in aix months covered with sand two kilom, of small and large boulders at a cost of £16,000.

Apostate Dutchman who has assumed the Moslem name of Haji Mohammed Husem-el-Mahdi. Said to be the younger son of a good Dutch family and is one of the richest men in Jeddah. Married as his second and probably higamous wife an Abyssimian, whom he maintains in dusky splendour in Monte Carlo. Agent for the Holt Line. (April 1928.)

Agent, Jeddah, to Sir Austen Chamberlain - (Received May 15.)

(No. 34.) (Telegraphic)

Joddak, May 15, 1925

FOLLOWING from Sir G. Clayton :-

'My conversations with Ibn Sand up to date have shown that main issue is the dismantling of Busaiyah and other desert posts. He contends that his people do not discriminate between unlitary and police posts, both of which they regard as preventing free movement throughout the desert, and also as bases for offensive action against them in the future as they have been during recent operations, he maintains that his strong objection to laying down a frontier in 1922 was due precisely to his fear that it would lead in the course of time to the establishment of desert posts and fortified posts, which would interfers with the free movement of tribes and would cause violent and justifiable resentment amongst them. His representative, Muhhamerah, exceeded his instructions by signing convention, and Ibn Saud was thereby faced with choice of admitting a principle which he strongly disapproved of or breaking with His Majesty's Government He accepted article 3 of Uquir Protocol No. 2 as a way out of the dilemma, because he considered it was expressly designed to meet his objection by preventing erection of any fortified pasts at any of the water points in the desert area, thus leaving them perfectly tree to his tribes. He musts, therefore, that he is unable now to accept a restricted interpretation of article 3 or to agree to the maintenance of posts without losing complete confidence of his tribesmen, and consequently his ability to control them

'On my aide I have insisted that His Majesty's Government must maintain principle that either Government is free to take whatever measures it may consider necessary for proper control and defence of the desert within its own territory. I cannot admit so wide an interpretation of article 3 as Ibn Saud demands, and the only admissible limitation is that posts should not be erected in the vicinity of the frontier

"I have used every argument to persuade him to drop his insistence on dismantling of posts, and I shall continue my conversations with him on the lines laid down in your instructions.

"I think, however, that he will probably find himself unable to give way, at 1 will still starte that he had been the first a to be at] His Majesty's Government insist on maintenance of posts. In this case I shall have to bring these conversations to a close, and question is on what terms to do so "In view of Ibn Saud's attitude there are three possible courses: Firstly, to give to give way at least in some measure on question of posts; secondly, to give Ibn Saud a final refusal, thirdly, to suspend negotiations

"The first would mean giving up a vital principle. The second might drive The Saud to desperation or make it impossible for him to retain control of his tribes. The third is the one I recommend, and I request authority to inform Ibn Saud, if necessary, that I propose to suspend our conversations in order to report his views fully to His Majesty's Government, who will communicate their final reply at a later date. I realise that this proposal is not a solution, but it is my considered opinion that a definite rupture in the present state of things would be ill-tuned and possibly dangerous. I cannot tell for certain how In a of will receive a primary for pastparament land I for it necessary to make it. If he is unwilling to adopt it, my only course is to inform him that I must report attuation to you by telegram and ask for instructions.

"On the other hand, if I find him agreeable to it I shall endeavour to secure further materials a special risk tracking of assurgs and an pression that postponement implies any possible change of policy with regard to posts. In view the fact that illerent feast fid on the 2st and I need to a line st he in Mecca for at least one week before and two weeks after it, I beg your instructions may be sent to me at your earliest convenience.

Enclosure in No. 61.

Jeddah Report for period April 1 to April 30, 1928

THE news received early in the month that Ibn Saud was prepared to meet Sir Gibert's livious it leidah mused general rehef among the Salid's well wishers The sit attent in Negit was becoming or bout. A large force, now officially stated to have numbered 60,000, had been collected near lqba. Ibn Saud, before the receipt of the invitation of His Majesty's Government to meet Sir Gilbert Clayton, had despatched Sultan him Bujad to reason with the tribes. On the receipt of the message he immediately sent his cousin, Saud ibn Abdul Aziz al Arafa, with orders to the chiefs to disband their forces and meet him at Bureida, explaining to them that his Majesty intended to repair to Jeddah to find a solution of their difficulties by negotiation with a representative of His Majesty a Government. Ibn Saud daly left Rivadh for Bureida and is now dady expected at Median, anitaer many of the notables have repaired to meet him. Bir Gilbert Clayton and the members of his mission are expected to arrive here on the 2nd May in H M.S. "Dahlia" from Port Sudan. The King is expected to spend one day at Medina, proceed direct to Mexes and arrive at Jeddah on the 4th May. Up to the time of writing, however, there is no news of his arrival at Medina. As he is now four days overdue, it is believed that he may have experienced more difficulty than he expected in reducing the chiefs to reason at Bureida

2. Amongst those who have left for Medins to receive the King is Hafiz Wahna who arrived from Cairo on the 25th instant. He has gained much prestige locally as a result of his miss, n to Frait The Minister for Longin Admirs, his noshound and most of the Jeddah notables made a special trip to the quarantine island, where Hafiz Wahls was detained one day. It is therefore to be presumed that the cloud under which Hafiz Wahba left this country for Koweit has now been dispersed He paid a brief call at this Agency at 8 P.M. on the 28th, explaining that he most leave immediately that might for Medina, as it was of the greatest importance that he abould see 1bn Saud before other influences had an opportunity of working on lis Majesty. As Hafiz Wahba had at one time a marked tendency to demand us the only solution of the Iraq-Nejd dispute the almost complete abandonment of the case for Iraq, it is not altogether clear what counsel he is likely to give the King In the course of the actual negotiations, he and Damluji, the only advisors with any width of vision, can, however, probably be relied upon to adopt a more conciliatory attitude than Yusef Yasan and Fuad Hamzs, both of whom are by name obstructive Yusef Yassun is responsible for the editing of the 'Uni-el Quen also for the deafting far of the less cently worken of the Rong scotters.

3 In the edition of the "Um-el-Qura" of the 30th March, much space was described to a criticism of Sir Henry Della at tenent of the attention, as reproduced in the "Times" of the 13th March. Raids cannot, the writer muintains, be presented by the building of furfactions and in a terrestable should be out restricted to the state of the prevent faids or the Summing Laborage byria, the more natural course would, the writer continues, surely be the erection of a fort on the Iraq-Syrian rather than on the Iraq-Nejd frontier. If, as Sir Henry Dobbs asserts the Besar do post can only accommodate never persons, what is its use as a protection against raiders? The "Um-el-Qura" continues to maintain that Busaivab is the first well after the frontier, and must therefore be regarded as one of those referred to in the Uquir Protocol. Answers to all these containts have been suffired at the King. Stionard these steps has a result of ment to frag. He how yo post was a point and intelligence post and not designed for offence. Busaiyah is not the first well after the frontier. As the writer of the leading articles in the "Um-el-Qura" has access to most, if not all, official correspondence, his comments are disingenuous

4. Special preparations are being made for the King's reception both at leadah and at Meces. We are officially informed that these preparations are the outcome of the spontaneous determination of a loyal and loving population to do honour to their beloved excernion. It is as he a. Too stoot of Je is tre to be the rated with his and the sand to see the temp between I - the rate per it the scaper - at the second to be but on I weary to old him glass and g negotiations has been refurnished.

5. Preparations for the reception and accommodation of Sir Gilbert Clayton's the large bungalow some 2 miles night of Teddah, which the king himself county occupies during his short visits to the coast.

6 Early in the month an unusual incident occurred at Mecca. On the a n instant a Bedomn me inted the July II of the Holy Mosque before the time of the preaching of the regular Friday sermon. He appears to have counciated describes or resited privers to what the congression took excel for the was part of with every kind of he said but is his area rivers not thereta effectively damped, he was fired at and wounded in the neck. He was transported to hospital, where he was pronounced insane. He is said to have recovered from his wound. The nucldent gave rise to so much wild talk that the Mecca Foreign Office were requested to supply an official version. Their version follows the lines of the above account, which was supplied by an eye-witness, except that they omit any mention of shooting. They state that " the congregation pelted him with anything that came to hand, but he did not come down until he was hit too much." Dr. Damluji states that "it is a small matter of no importance." Early reports brought by chauffours and prigrims from Mecca stated that the unauthorised preacher to be a new Mahdi from Syria, others believed him to be a member of the Yemenite mission to Ibn Saud, but it is now established that he was a Bedouin from Medina

7. The Yemenite mission is still at Mocca awaiting the arrival of the King. It is difficult to see how His Majesty will find the necessary time to devote to them, as the days before the pilgrimage are likely to be fully occupied with conversations with Sir Gilbert Clayton's mission. It is rumoured that the Yemenis have instructions to insist on the withdrawal of Ibn Saud's mandate over Asir. In the probable event of negotiations on this basis proving fruitless, the Imam may move and to this end has concentrated forces at Mehdi, while Ibn Saud also has taken recautions against a possible attack. These reports are unconfirmed. Meanwhile, the mission is treated with the greatest respect, but is allowed little contact with the trade and increous title I amount a staff a situate at a access

The newly-appointed Egyptian consul, Mohammed Said, and the vice-consul. M. Matar, arrived in Jeddah on the 5th instant. The former has thrown himself with much slan into the life of Jeddah, and, from a social point of view, is an asset. Whether he will be a success officially is doubtful. In conversation with one of his colleagues, he has prepared the ground for posmble failure by fairly frank criticism of his predecessor.

9 At the request of the Hejaz Government, the conference which it was proposed to call early in the year at Haifa to discuss technical details concerning of July There is likely to be much competition for the appointment as Heint celes a Dr Alad all the it comment the most well in the a or Yusef Yassin may well be chosen, as Damluji's services so soon after the prigramage could with difficulty be dispensed with

10 The four Hejaz postal employees whom the Government of Palestine were good enough to accept for training have now terminated their six months' course, and the Majesty's High Commissioner has been requested to arrange for their return These trained employees should prove an asset, though it must be admitted that the Hejaz postal services are surprisingly efficient

11. The number of pilgrims arriving from overecas has shown a very marked decline on last year's figures, and it is now safe to predict that the total number will not far exceed 90 000. During the last month some 10,000 only have arrived, he may the total to 68 000. Six then all F at the exceed 3.00 the number of Persians is unlikely to exceed 2.000. North Africans may be more plentiful than last year. According to present advices of sailings from India 25.000 is the maximum, a very heavy drop on last year's $7,000. It is difficult to gauge the office with executed process events a higher place exerced There were several reasons for the special popularity and size of last year's pilgringe. The plane was expected to fall on a brider time decouring sevenfold the resulting merit and reward, and for the first time it was generally known to be safe, and many come who would normally have come in 1924 or 1925 As a result of the unexpected falling off in numbers, motor car companies are making and in the transfer of the companies are making the companies are making and in the companies are making and an are making and an are mat output of 150 tons a day. There is now no risk of lack of water at the time of the return pilgrimage. It will thus be possible to allow a much greater number of pilgrims to proceed to Jeddah immediately after the pilgrimage than was last year possible.

12 There is news, unconfirmed as yet, of the departure of a Russian prigram ship, which it is understood is proceeding from Odessa, via Constantinople

18. A commission has been appointed at Mecca for the better control of mutawwifs. Among the duties of the commission will be the inspection of pilgrim lodging houses, the hearing of prigrims complaints, and the reporting to the central authorities of any infraction by mutawwife of regulations.

14. Among improvements introduced for the amelioration of the pilgrims' lot are the following -

Reservoirs have been repaired and others built at Muna, Arafat and Mecca-Large tents have been ordered and are to be erected for the use of pilgrims on the Jeddah Mecca and Mecca-Arafat roads

Twenty ambulances for the removal of the sick and dead from Muna and Arnfat have been ordered

Twenty motor trucks will be employed to remove refuse from Mecca and from the camps at Muna and Arafat

15 A large consignment of the coins, silver and nickel, to which reference is made in Jeddah report for January, have been received. The King recently placed a large order, through Sharqieh (Limited) for furniture for his personal use, and this has now arrived. Plants and seeds for the Royal garden at Mecca bave been sent from the Sudan and Cyprus and India te the seriors alex will take religiously the Agency thering the month under review was four. All of these were at their own request manumitted locally and have remained in the Hejaz

"I have assented to assue by Ibn Sand of the following official communiqué.

" Negotiations between His Majesty the King of the Hejaz and Nejd and the British Mission under Brigadier-General Sir Gilbert Clayton were opened at Jeddah on 8th May, 1928, with a view to settling certain outstanding matters. between the Negd, Iraq and Transpordants. Satisfactory progress was made in several of the questions under discussion. But owing to the approach of the pilgrimage season it became necessary to suspend negotiations, and the British Mission is taking advantake of this opportunity to return to London to report progress to His Majesty's Government, subsequently returning to Jeddah at the earliest opportunity to resume negotiations. It is a matter for satisfaction to note that these negotiations were animated throughout by a spirit of conciliation and generice desire on both sides to arrive at a settlement of a nature to ensure good relations between the three countries concerned."

Jeddah, May 9, 1928.

I HAVE the honour to report, with reference to my telegram No. 30 of the 2nd instant, that Sir Gilbert Clayton, accompanied by Mr. Cornwallia, Mr Antonius, Flight-Licutenant Moore and Captain Glubb, arrived at Jeddah on the 2nd instant from Port Sudan in H.M.S. " Dahlia."

2. A ceremonial reception was accorded to Sir Gilbert Clayton. The Foreign Minister and his assistant, the kaunakam and I, accompanied by His Majorty's vice-consul, went on board to welcome the mission as soon as the ship had dropped anchor and fired her salute.

3. A goard of honour was drawn up at the landing-stage and cars stood ready for the immediate conveyance of the mission to Kandara. Arrangements both for Sir Gilbert Clayton's reception and for the accommodation of the mission were most efficiently carried out. I understand that His Majosty considered last year that sufficient attention had not been paid to entertainment. In consequence, since the arrival for as there has been an a safety sea chair to make reporters

4. The King passed through Jeddah on his way to Mecca from Medina on the 5th metant. He did not, however, make his ceremonial entry until the 7th instant. In consultation with Sir Gilbert Clayton and Commander Cotton, of H.M.S. "Dahlin." it was agreed that the sloop should await the King's arrival and should fire a salute

of hearts to the howb

The cursion and the agency staff were received by the King on the morning of the 7th instant and other foreign representatives in the afternoon. In the evening a large banquet was given to celebrate His Majesty's return to the Hejaz. The musica, the officers of H.M.S. " Dahlia," the agency staff, the foreign representatives and most of the European colony attended. During dinner H.M.S. "Dablia" gave a firework display, which was much appreciated.

to Jeddah for the pilgrimage

2. Haroun Bey Selun is no friend of the Wafd, and his prigrimage has probably no special aignificance. It is, however, difficult to believe that the other two are solely concerned with the religious aspect of the pilgrimage. It is presumed that they have been charged by the Prime Minister to engage unofficial conversations with Ibn Saud, in the hope of finding a basis for the settlement of outstanding questions such as the Mahmal and the recognition of Ihn Saud by Egypt. They have no doubt been selected because they are both Arabs

3. The Egyptian Government has delegated Kamal-el-Kheshen Bey, Director of Works in the Ministry of Communications, Hamed Shaker Bey, an official of the Ministry of Workfs and M. Musse, By Director of the Service of Buildings in the Ministry of Public Works, to investigate the possibilities of certain urban improvements in the Hejiz including the it leader of An Z beida for the water supply of Mecca. Consul-General Salow to Sir Austen Chamberlain .- (Received January 21)

(No. 7)

Sir,
WiTH reference to Foreign Office despatch No. 141 of the 13th October, 1924,
I have the honour to report that, for some little time past, the local press has been showing a renewed interest in the scheme for linking up Tripoli with Beirut, and possibly also with Haifa, by rail. It will be remembered that in 1923-24, when Geteral Weight discipling the literature of the main difficulties has been understood to be the question of obtaining the necessary funds. It has also been suggested that M Ponsot, although at first in favour of the achame, has of late been opposed to the establishment of rail connexion with Haifa, fearing that the construction of a port at that place would react unfavourably upon the commercial prosperity of Beirut and adversely affect the "Damas-Hama Prolongement" Railway and port

2. However that may be, the local press reports the impending arrival in Beirut by rail via Aleppo of M. Chonut (chairman of the board of directors of the Régie générale des Chemins de Fer et Travaux publics, and interprets this news as showing that the question of the railway has now reached its final stage. It is added that the Regie générale takes over the working of the Damas-Hama

Prolongement Railway and of the Beirnt Port Company

3. According to one newspaper, which is apt to be well informed in such matters, and which speaks only of the Tripoli-Beirut Railway, there is no question of a local group, headed by Negib Bey Sursock and the Luffellahs, financing, as was rumoured, the construction of the new line, seeing that the Lebanese Government can itself provide the funds. This evidently means that the share of the Lebanon in the excess customs duties which have been accumulating for some years with a view to the definite fixing of the Lebanese share in the Ottoman Public Debt is to be drawn upon. At one time it was understood that this reserve fund, which is believed to be considerable, was to be used for public works undertakings of a general nature, and that the various States had been asked to submit schemes as to how the money could best be used. That it is no longer so to be used seems to be confirmed by a statement which appeared some little time back in the press to the effect that the States had been requested not to proceed with their schemes.

4. It is claimed by the newspaper already quoted that the Damas-Hama Prolongement has the definite right to construct the new line. In 1913 it obtained a fer i has from Right to Right have I was a to red impossing by the war. In 1925, when the company's concessionary rights were readapted, it was promised an equivalent concession or fair compensation payable after five years

(No. 9. Confidential.)

Principles the vest of left the 51 December last the Lebonon made a very distinct still the name of the country like the carry out disarrangent operations on a limited scale in certain districts. This happy state of things was reflected in a good summer season. It is in a country like this impossible to give figures having any pretension to accuracy, but the number of summer visitors must certainly have exceeded 10,000. They were able to move freely about the country, and apparently left the Lebanon feeling fairly satisfied. The efforts made to attract visitors are thus bearing fruit, but it is necessary that these efforts should not be relaxed

Better public accurity everywhere was effected in the reopening of the southern (Nairn) route to Bagdad, which took place in May. The Palmyra route now appears to be but little used, and the hotel built there by the defenct Beyrouth-Baghdad. Teheran Automobiles (Eastern Transport Company) is reputed to be becoming rapidly detailed. No untoward events fortunately occurred on the desert routes, but I incline to the helief that the various regulations intended to asfeguard travelters are far from being strictly enforced, and that it would be worth the while of the Syrian and Iraq authorities to arrange a meeting to discuss the question. There is always the cline that on a route of this nature some unexpected tragedy may occur.

3. Some progress was made during the year with the compensation, and more especially with the rehousing, of sufferers from the disturbances of 1925-26, but much remains to be done and the important question of the rebuilding of Rashaya has not yet been settled

4. As regards the administration of the Lebanon, the country's prosperity is audoubtedly retarded by the de Jouvenel Constitution, which gave an entirely unnecessary stimulus to potty political intrigue. Time and such energy as existare vamily wasted over matters which hear no relation to the real interests of the substitute. Owing to a dispute between the Senate and the Chamber, the budget was not voted until April. This led in due course to a practically emply treasury, which could only be replenished by drawing on the Labanon abure in the excess customs receipts-a dangerous practice. Fublic discontent with the intration is general and heavy taxation in particular led to a demonstration in August, as a result of which shops and offices were closed for several days. One result of this was a decrease of 29 per cent, in the temette tax. In October an important step towards the plan of the machinery was taken by uniting the two Chambers into one ow this was achieved were duly reported at the time. It seems likely that this is but the first step, and that further improvements will be introduced later There had previously been a ministerial crisis in May and a second one was threatened at the end of the year. Actually, the latter did not materialise, but, as reported in my despatch No. 4 of the 9th January, another change of Ministry has just occurred

During the year the French High Commissioner at Inst broke his silence, and made in July a declaration in which in many words he said what amounted to very nothing it is because he has nothing to say. He is undoubtedly a very contions man, and seems to be so anxious to take the right course that he weight the pros and cons almost to the point of apparent indecision. Various schemes are presumably being prepared, but in actual fact very little seems to have been actually done during the year. This is partly because the present policy seems to be to leave more and more to the Lebanese Government. In theory that is no doubt excellent, but as regards practical results it is less so. Most branches of the public service are mefficiently conducted, and in several of them, notably the Police, Public Works and Health Departments, serious scandals came to light during the year. As for the Finance Department, a nominal inspection is alleged to be in progress, but as it has been entrusted to inspectors friendly to the late Minister, no irregularities are likely to be brought to light. This does not, of course, mean that irregularities have not occurred. It seems uscless to mention once more the unsatisfactory judicial organization. It is a matter of public knowledge and general complaint. All that has no far been done is to produce a draft scheme of reorganisation which is soon to be submitted to the Lebanese Chamber. What will happen to it there no one can foresee. As likely as not the new Cabinet of three members which has just been formed will fall. When it does there will be another "crisis," and ell the officials down at the Serai will cease working and once more devote themselves to political discussion and intrigue. Down at the port there is much confusion. The Customs sheds were burnt down last May A few temporary sheds have been streeted and a knan some distance from the quay bus been hired, but no definite scheme of general reconstruction seems yet even to have been decided upon. It is sometimes a mystery to the lay mind how shipping agents and merchants can carry on, but they manage to do so. The winter has so far been unusually fine, but should heavy and continuous rain fall, as it presumably eventually will, much damage to goods in likely to occur

6. The beginning of the year found us in pretty general dislavour with the French owing to the presence of Druses at Axiak in Trans-Jordan and their mentsions thence into Syria. This question was eventually settled as the French wished it to be, and the settlement, of course, reacted favourably on local Anglo-French relations. Towards the end of the year there were signs of further friction in the same region, due to the indeterminate nature of the frontier. An unmarked boundary was also responsible for various incidents on the Iraq-Syris frontier near the Jebel Sinjer, the settlement of which was not rendered easier by a marked divergence between and a British and French views on the matter at issue. On the other hand, a visit by the hrat submariae floutla, followed by one from Rear-Admiral David Norris in H.M.S. "Royal Oak," passed off very successfully and left good feeling in its train. On the whole the atmosphere at the High Commission is a friendly and helpful one.

Consul-General Satow to Sir Austen Chamberlain .- (Received January,

(No. 15.) Sir.

Beirut, January 21, 1928.

WITH reference to my despatch No. 7 of the 12th January relative to the revival of local interest in the Tripoli Berrat Haifa Railway, I have the honour to report that a Beirut newspaper, the "Orient," published on the 17th and 18th January two articles, one of which by a local engineer criticised the scheme for a line along the coast from Tripoli and argued in favour of a normal gauge line to Beirnt via Rayak and Hamana (Lebanon), while the other reproduced an interview with the M. Chennt already mentioned. Of this latter the gist was that nothing had been decided, that M. Chenut had come here in the normal course of events on a tour of inspection and that, so far as the talked-of line was concerned, it was a sample possibility. M Chenut. was fire in 1 and for the "Damas Hama-Prolongement" the right to build the line if it were built, disclauned all knowledge of the financial side of the question and said that he was simply the man who lave the rails. His message to the public was that his rails were ready to be laid down whenever he was usked to lay them.

2. On the other hand, in the brief address of the Lebanese Prime Minister to the Chamber on its resistenthing in extraordinary session on the 18th January, appeared the passage of which the following is a translation from the French version of the crightal Arabic :---

"On many occasious public opinion has demanded through its representatives here present, and rightly so, that every effort should be devoted to the carrying out of important works of public utility, the first of which is the building of the Nakura-Tripoli Railway. In this order of ideas the Government is resolved to give to the country all such satisfaction as is possible, and that with all desirable speed "

As it costus legitimate to assume that Becham-el-Khoury drew up his declaration in consultation with the French authorities, it is after all possible that the latter do intend that the long-talked-of railway, or some part of it, should be built Copies of this despatch have been sent to Jerusalem and to Aleppo No. 8.

Consul Hole to Ser Austen Chamberlasn .- (Received March 20.)

(No. 21.) MIL.

Damascus, February 23, 1928.

I HAVE the honour to submit a summary report on the late ministerial changes

2. Since the Cabinet was modified in December 1926 (see my despatch No. 312 of the 6th December, 1926), a campaign had been directed against the Damad's Government and in particular against Yussef el Hakim, the Minister of Justice on whose counsels the Damad was accustomed to rely. The Damad had never been over-popular -- by his acceptance of the post of Chief of the State of Syria during the revolt he had alienated the Nationalists, extreme and moderate, and his torough blood made him further unacceptable to the principal Damascene families. This breach was widened by his surrounding himself with a semi-royal étiquette, apparently on the advice of Yussef el-Hakim, and by the beginning of this month it was generally felt that he was supported only by the French administration.

3 The pacification of Syria being considered complete, the French Government de plant the total of the total and the advantage all advantage all and the second transporting statute. It is impossible to state with certainty that the press campaign, which led the Damad to resign was engineered by the French administration, that is certainly the opinion of members of the outgoing Government. A number of attacks in news papers known to be in opposition were followed by an attack in the "Sha ab"a journal heally supposed to be in French pay. The Danial went to Berrut to obtain saturfaction and support from the High Commissioner, and was presumably disampointed. His resignation was offered on the 9th February be explained that he had accepted the presidency in the hope of piloting the ship of State into still waters, that he was content to have succeeded but that conceiving that certain persons might doubt his impartial conduct of the elections, his conscience obliged him to make room for a new Government. M. Ponsot congratulated him on his success inon the tenderness of his conscience and accepted his resignation

4. Attempts were made at Beirut to form a provisional Government of a Nationalus colouring that would be amenable to the advice of the High Commission. various combinations of extremists and moderates were suggested. His Majesty's consul general at Beirnt is better acquainted with those negotiations and bas doubtless reported on them. In Damaseus it became evident that the High Commissioner's delegate had come to the conclusion that Sheikh Tajeddine weal I form a completely subservient Ministry and was pressing M. Ponsot for a decision in that sense. He won his point and on the 16th February M. Ponsot during a short stay at Damaseus gave his approval to a Cabunet composed as follows:

The Mahasen Minister of Interior Soubhi Bey Nayal Minister of Justice Djenut Boy Ukhi Minister of 1 A Melamed Bey Kurd Ali Minister Lafacaciet Bey Channels Minister of Public Works. Sheikh Abdul Kader-el Kdam . Minister of Agriculture and Commerce

5. This Ministry came into power officially on the 18th February The Damad is not replaced, his functions being provisionally exercised by the President of the Council.

6 The Ministry is in no way remarkable. Some Ministers have previous he is the figure bend of a triumvarate of whom Djointl Bey I lehi and Wasiq Bey Muayyad are the dominant partners. The latter holds no portfolio, but has accepted the more permanent post of Director of the Syrum Department of Land Registry Djenul Bey Ulchi is the only outstanding figure. He is locally regarded as the betrayer of Feisal to the French, who appointed him Prime Minister on toking possession of Syria A capable and anscripnions is litician.

7 The immediate object of the Ministry is to carry out the elections they expect to encounter little difficulty in the rural districts, but foresee strong Nationalist opposition in Dimascus, Hama and Aleppo and certain defeat in Hous They are, however, confident of securing a working pro French majority in the

Constituent Assembly

8. On the occasion of the formation of the Ministry the High Commussioner published decrees abolishing the state of siege and press consure and granting a partial amnesty. The last is not extended to thirty nine pontical offenders and twenty-eight persons condemned for crime though the distinction is in some cases a trifle shadows. 2. Several lists of candidates were presented, but the only mane was between the Government and the Nationalists. Until the primary elections were held, the two parties had been in agreement to submit a joint list of six Governmental and four Nationalist candidates, exclusive of the Catholic, Urthodox and Jewish members When it became apparent that the Government was using the public services to procure the return of its own nominees, the Nationalists put in an independent list, Lit liete t S. 3. Sheikh Taj-ed-Din allowed his name to be put at the head of all hats, and I believe him to be perfectly indifferent to any consideration but his own accession to

4. In Damascus the result has been a sweeping victory for the Nationalist party; the nine candidates who obtained an absolute majority in the first day's polling (and are thus definitely elected) all figure in the Nationalist list. One is the Jewish cartific and was in present beren an battenand reserve, and the out to a Sheikh Taj-ed-Din, the only member of his party to be returned.

Three Mostem and one Greek Catholic Deputy remain to be slected, and a second ballot will be held on the 27th April.

6. The elections aroused great interest, and out of some 700 voters only nine failed to record their votes

7. The Government made atrenuous efforts to buy the votes of the villages, and on the day of the pell sums varying from £500 to £600 storling were sent to each village as rebef for damage sustained in the late rebellion, and official cars were provided to convey the electors to town; however, no particular success means to have attended this tardy philanthropy, and indeed in some cases the money was sent back and the cars refused.

8. There was naturally a certain amount of demonstration and disturbance, The strate to which has pearing start a abuts was packed from an earny actor, and the task of dealing with the crowd had been left to the Syrian gendarmene. Foci-el-liker, an active leader in the rebellion, whose pardon had been procured by Taj-ed-Din present the state of the support of parsing to a set of state, a rived with states to ensure the peaceable conduct of the elections. Their presence around some bostility in other camps and the Syrian gendarinerie intervened and was stoned. The French officer in command was struck between the eyes with a stone, and the square was cleared by a series of charges. Another French officer was wounded, but on the whole the day was remarkably q . . .

2. Of the six Ministers forming the Government, three presented themselves for election at Damascus and were defeated; it is, however, possible that some may be returned on the second ballot. The Minister of Education did not stand. The two remaining Ministers are candidates at Hama and Aleppo respectively. The Minister of Agriculture is sure of success at Hams, as there are three candidates for three sents, at Aleppo I understand that the elections are contested. The attuation of the Ministers who fail to obtain seats is somewhat obscure, but I gather that it is argued that in the case of a Constituent Assembly ordinary parliamentary rules do not hold and there is no need of evidence of the confidence of the nation. The defeated Ministers will therefore accept office, unless as a concession to Nationalist feeling the Government decides to make scapegoats of the Ministers of Interior and Finance, who were chiefly concerned in the abuses in the primary elections.

10. No date has yet been fixed for the meeting of the Assembly, which will be chiefly occupied in elaborating a Constitution and defining the relations between the State of Syris and the mandatory Power, and, so far as I can hear, the Nationalist parts our attenue to my acres that the ere was taken of value will take if some sort of coalition develops from the present situation, it will be interesting to Damaseus, April 13, 1928. THE Cabinet formed by Sheikh Taj-ed-Din, on which I reported in my despatch No. 21 of the 23rd February, has devoted the two months of its existence to the careful preparation of the elections for the Constituent Assembly. The primary elections were held during the last three days, the secondary elections are announced for the 24th Apri 2. Tay ed-Din has been extremely active, visiting all the important centres and conducting protracted negotiations with the Nationalist party. His assurances of entire sympathy with their views and desire to collaborate with them were taken at something less than their face value by the Nationalists; but as they apprehended that a refusal to treat them with the present Government would result in repressive measures, they accepted his overtures and agreed to work with him, on the understanding that four of the twelve seats of Dumascus should be allotted to their candidates.

. Neither party seems to have had any belief in the successty of the other's intentions, and at the last moment the Nationalist Committee took occurrent to submit a list of ten candidates instead of four, basing their repudiation of the agreement on undue interference with the liberty of the elections on the part of the Minister of the

4. There seems to be no doubt that many serious abuses occurred, nor that the Prince Minister as well as the Minister of the Interior was involved. The Nationalists, however, have chosen to confine their attacks to the latter, and the succession of demonstrations of the last few days has been levelled against the Minister of the Interior, and care has been taken to emphasise their affection for Sheikh Taj-ed-Din.

5. In nearly all wards the Nationalist candidates have been successful and it is asserted that in those where they experienced a set-back extensive bribery was practised and the ballot boxes were tampered with by police. The most important quarters concerned are the Kesmariyo, which is the ward of the Prime Minister and the Minister of Figance, and the Saroudja quarter, where the Minister of Interior was returned. The allegations seem to be justified

6. The French authorities have taken pains to stress their alcofness from the conduct of these primary elections, and the High Commissioner in visiting a number of the polls assured voters that they were absolutely free to vote as they pleased

7. Candidates in the forthcoming secondary elections number about seventy, most of whom have also been returned as electors. The only conspicuous absence from the lists is Fures-el-Khoury, who is barred from standing by his Protestant faith that community being too small to be entitled to a representative under the present electoral system.

2. An effort is being made to-day to secure the election of Government candidates to the remaining four seats. The three Ministers have withdrawn their candidature, and propagands is being concentrated on Four-el-Bakri, Said-el-Gazzi, Abdel Qader-el-Khateeb and Shaker Quem. Of these the first two are popular, or were till they joined the Government; the last two are well known as political weather as k

3. The square has been cleared and picketed with genelarmen, and to obtain admission voters are required to present documentary proofs of identity. No Nationalist will be admitted to the count. The chief of police has been dismissed, and his place provincially occupied by Wasiq Bey Musyyad, Director of the Public Domains (see my deepatch No. 21 of the 23rd February, paragraph 6). In view of these arrangements

It is highly probable that the four (novernment candidates will be elected.

Notes on the Sunjak of Doir ez-Zer

Limits

IHE Sanjak of Derr-ez-Zor comprises the north-east part of the State of Syria, its boundaries are shown on the "Carte administrative des Etats de Syrie forwarded to the Foreign Office with Aleppo despatch No. 55 of the 26th July, 1927 From that it will be seen that its southern boundary runs in a broken line running south-east from Meskene, where the Euphrates changes its course from south to east to a point on the provisional south-east border of Syria, about 80 miles south-west of Abu Kemal. Its north-west border is not the Euphrates all along, as might be expected, but deviates from it to the east so as to leave that part of the Kaza of Jerabius which is east of the Euphrates within the Vilayet of Aleppo. The point of this is that the Kaza of Jerabius is settled land, and the confines of the Sanjak of Deir-ez-Zor have been so fixed as to correspond with the northern part of the nomadic zone. Its northern and eastern limits are, of course, the Turkish and Iraquan borders.

Physical.

While most of the country is desert, with the exception of some fertile land near rivers, the desert has various degrees of intensity. The Euphrates divides the river into two sones of markedly different characteristics. The right bank river lairly close to the river into abrupt cliffs, over which is a plateau of rough formation. This southern desert is very arid, and increasingly so as one continues east. Normally there should be spring pusturage in the western parts, but when the writer passed through at the end of April 192s the whole region appeared quite numbabitable

The northern region is known as the "Jezirch," or the island. It is, a plan ally speaking, I pper Mesopotamia. In general it is a plan, through which run considerable tributaries of the Euphrates, the Balikh to the west, and the Euphranean stream, were it not that in summer all its water is used for arrigation so that it does not reach the Euphrates. The Khabur is a periminent full stream, which, at the end of April 1928, was 15 feet deep and 50 yards across the contract of the fixed. It is the end of April 1928, was 15 feet deep and 50 yards across the contract of the fixed, it is the end of the fixed, it is the end of the Khabur to the rest of the Khabur find good pasturage when I passed and the extreme north-east in the "Bee de Canard" was said to be the best of all. Posturage can normally be found all summer in the northern parts. The region in the triangle west of the Khabur and north of the Enphrates is the most republicle desert of all, municipalitable at all times

There are two ranges of mountains, the Jebel Abdul Aziz, west of the Khabur, and the Jebel Sinjar to the east, through which the provisional Iraquan frontier runs. Neither it completely and

The Euphrates valley itself is in general cultivated, but the land appeared surprisingly sour and poor. The height of the banks at all times of year, except the river to fined makes it are lifted in a the property of irrigation. Extensive schemes of irrigation with Government aid have been much talked about, but there is no indication at all when, if ever, the next stage beyond talk is expected to be reached. The Euphrates has a width of 200-300 yards in this just of its course, and a depth which may vary according to the season from 5-50 feet. When I passed Deir-ez Zor the river was a boiling spate running, by actual measurement, at 3 metres a second, or 7 miles an hour. In these conditions it not infrequently changes its bed, which makes land owning in the neighbourhood rather a speculative.

Population

The only considerable town is Deir-ez-Zor, which has a population approaching 30 nm. The vist for the highest is made possible by a sufficiently fortile island in the Euphrates, on which the town is partly built. Deir-ez-Zor is the centre of the desert trade. Its inhabitants are almost entirely Arabs. Meskene, Rakka and Meyadine, the other places of note along the Euphrates, are small and squalid villages. Hassettebe in the north-east, at the confinence of the Khabur and the Jaghjagh.

an interesting history. Until the last few years it was a tiny Arab settlement of no importance. Favoured by its position in a spot where the wilderness is more than usually green, it is developing into a prosperous little town of several thousand inhabitants, at least half of whom are Christian refugees from Turkey (Armenians and Chaldmans). It is becoming a central trading mart for the Upper Jezirch. Kameshlyk (the last syllable has varied spellings) is a place with a similar history. It practically did not exist till a year or two ago, and the name only appears on the more recent maps. It is less than a mile south of Nessibin, at which it looks over the Turkish frontier It is really an offshoot of Nissibin on the Syrian side, inhabited by people who wall here are not tree interested by people who wall here are trees and to have on the mandated side of the border. The importance to the French of such a place is obvious. It is not the only instance of such duplication. Jerablus has an entirely new quarter on the Syrian side, which started as a refugee camp of Armenians, and is now considerably more prosperous than its Turkish counterpart

To turn now to the Bedonin, who form the characteristic and most important part file per la collaboration la tegerationation their I rench have doubtless tribal lists, from which an approximate figure could be arrived at, but I have not cared to ask them, fearing that the motives of such a question might be misunderstood. Moreover, the boundaries of the sanjak correspond to no physical realities, and tribes may cross and recross them without being aware of the lact, so that their numbers are far from constant. It is well known that the nomadmode of life is not a matter of preference, although doubtless many Arabs have become so used to it that they would find a settled existence irksome, but is imposed upon them In the a post There are note the between the property porter or The results consist of sizes for word in the and the size is an A I there all the first and all the all the state of the st keep goats, whose hair is used for making their tents, camels for transport horses. frichtz ada s dendes den exfrasel expanses beboat is the selection of the selection of site the outside world, to sell the produce of their sheep, and their extra camela (horses, they practically never sell), and buy the elementary necessities of life, namely, clothing, all articles of diet except mutton and arms and ammunition. All other commodities are classed as luxuries. Their nomadic life is a pursuit of pasture for their animals from season to ceason. An unusually dry winter may occasionally drive them clean out of the desert, to spend the summer as rather unwelcome temporary guests in settled parts of the country

While I have had no opportunity of making a specialised state of trial estimate about alwest of the real of his notice to the other form. of activity, certain broad outlines strike the casual observer. The west is mainly inhabited by sections of the Anizah Arabs, and the east by Shammar. There is a considerable difference in character between them. The Anizah are more tractable. and more desposed to an understanding of the non nomadic standpoint. Several of their chiefs have set up as landowners, and ser to it that their tenant cultivators are not molested by raids. The Shammar are wilder, fiercer and more turbulent Neither tribe can be relied on not to raid the herds of a rival faction, or a trading caravan, if a tight control is not kept on them

Administrative.

Deir ez Zor, alone amongst all provinces of the State of Syria, is under the supreme authority of the military power. The officer commanding is the High Commissioner's delegate, and is assisted by a civilian. Moreover, his military control is not confined to the sanjak, but extends west and south to include Palmyra, in fact the whole of the nomadic area up to the confines of Home and Damaseus. It must be said that on the whole Colonel Ripert, whose term of office expires at the end of this month, has done fairly well. For a long time tribal raids and attacks on caravans have been unknown. It is not even certain that a car stranded in the desert would be looted. He also informed me with pride that he had collected from the tribes 99 per cent of this year's taxes and five years' arrears. Although his military work in controlling and administering the tribes has been excellent, he is of a volutile temperament, and is apt to be impatient and negligent in dealing with matters of routine civil administration. He is also rather mannerless in his personal and official relations. These faults have not made things very happy in his dealings with the Iraq authorities, with whom there is an immense amount of business to be done, and his departure is not being regretted by them.

Deir-ez-Zur returned Nationalist Deputies, like other districts. The degree of political maturity in the nomadic region being even less advanced than here, it is impossible to say what state of mind amongst the population this phenomenon corresponds to, nor in what way these Deputies will look after tribal affairs in the Seem Prime to If the pressent the completion of the regular schemes

Political

The road from Aleppo to Deir, z Zor consists facility of a desert track on the table-land south of the Euphrates, touched up here and there with metalled stretches where the surface is too rough. The distance is an easy ten hours in dry weather. including all halts. This road will be described in more detail in my forthcoming report on the Aleppo-Mosul trade route. In the Jezureh road-making is quite unnecessary, as the desert presents a uniform surface fit for motor travel in any direction. The only bar consists of the rivers. The Euphrates has a bridge at Jerablus for the railway only, and is nowhere bridged for road traffic. A bridge is being built at Deir-ez-Zor. The Khabur has a good bridge at Suwar Elsewhere everything must be ferried, and at flood water ferries may be extremely dangerous It was mainly this that deterred me from returning by the northern track. The motor has already begun to exercise a transformation of local habits, the ultimate consequences of which will be far-reaching and are impossible to estimate

I was informed in reply that Turkish Government had stated that they did not recognise the protocol. I replied that His Majesty's Government considered the matter settled and not open added that if, admitting this, the Persian Government arranged with the Turkish Government for some rectification of frontier or if after recognition of Iraq the Persian Government wished by diplomatic means to approach Iraq Government with a view to some small rectification of frontier. No. 89.

Sir Austen Chamberlain to Chewky Pasha.

Foreign Office, January 17, 1928. ON the 5th September last the Turkish Ambassador communicated to Sir W. Tyrrell a memorandum, drawing attention to the reported presence of a number of armed Nestorians in the vicinity of the Turkish village of "Arochs." His Excellency also mentioned the question of the retention of their rifles by Nestorians discharged from the Iraq levies, and in a further memorandum, dated the 19th Suptember, stated that, according to a communication received from the Turkish Government, it appeared that a band of armed Nestorians had crossed the frontier on the 9th August last, and had fired upon the Turkish patrols.

In the note which I had the honour to address to his Excellency on the 5th October, I pointed out that, in the opinion of His Majesty's Government, the question of the reported presence of armed Nestorians in this area should properly have been dealt with, in the first instance, by the frontier authorities, and, failing agreement between them, by the Permanent Frontier Commission. Enquiries have, however, been made with a view to ascertaining the exact situation on this portion of the frontier, and the Acting High Commissioner for Iraq has reported that the local authorities of that country have no knowledge of any incidents which could form the basis of the reports mentioned in his Excellency's note of the 19th September The Assyrians to the south of Arish are, in fact, grazing their sheep on their own lands; they have not committed, and do not contemplate, any hostile act against Turkey, and are, moreover, forbidden to approach within two miles of the frontier.

3. As regards the permission accorded to men discharged from the Iraq levies to retain their arms, I have the honour to inform you that the retention of rifles and ammunition by members of the levies on discharge from that force is conditional upon their giving an undertaking not to take such rifles outside Iraq, and also to return to the colours in defence of Iraq if called upon to do so. With a view to the strict enforcement of this undertaking, a further warning against taking rifles outside the boundaries of Iraq has recently been circulated to all members of the force. I may add that His Majesty's Government will be glad to receive from the Turkish Government information of any well authenticated cases of Assyrians (who have been members of the levies) entering Turkish territory in possession of arms, in order that action in conformity with the law may be taken against the offenders on their return to Iraq.

4. In conclusion, I have the honour to inform you that enquiries are being pursued as regards the further points raised in the memorandum which his Excellency was so good as to communicate to me on the 14th November last, relative to the proposed settlement of Assyrians and others in certain areas of Iraq, and I shall not fail to address a further note to you on these questions as soon as I am in a position to do so.

No. 90.

Sir Austen Chamberlain to Ferid Bey.

Your Excellency, Foreign Office, March 5, 1928. ON the 16th November last your Excellency was so good as to communicate to me a memorandum, dated the 14th November, relative to certain reports of incidents in the neighbourhood of the Turco-Iraq frontier, to which the Turkish Government desired to draw attention.

2. In my note of the 17th January to Chewky Pasha I dealt with the points raised in the first two paragraphs of your memorandum, adding that I proposed, as soon as I was in a position to do so, to address a further note to you with regard to the questions raised in the third paragraph of the memorandum, namely the reported proposals for the establishment of Assyrians and others in the neighbourhood of the frontier, and the allegations respecting the organisation of Kurdish national propaganda in Iraq.

3. As regards the report mentioned in paragraph 3 (a) of your memorandum, I have now the honour to inform you that it is the case that Assyriana are being settled in the Zakho and Amadia districts, but that the settlements are not in the immediate vicinity of the frontier. The settlement nearest to the frontier consists of a number of persons who have been settled in the village of Mai, but arrangements are now being made for these persons to be moved elsewhere. I may add that the settlement of Assyrians in permanent villages is, in the opinion of both His Majesty's Government and the Iraq Government, the surest safeguard against any attempt by them to make armed incursions into Turkish territory; all the settlers are under the supervision of the competent local authorities in Iraq, and there is no reason to suppose that they will violate the frontier.

4. In paragraph 3 (6) of the memorandum you referred to a report that 15,000 Armenians were to be established to the north-west of the town of Mosul. This report is probably due to a misunderstanding, as no scheme for the settlement of Armenians in this area has been in contemplation. It seems possible, however, that the scheme which the Turkish Government had in mind was one which has been under consideration by the Iraq Government, for the settlement of a number of Assyrians in the Baradest area. A final decision has not yet been reached in regard to this project.

5. In the final section of paragraph 3 of the memorandum you alluded to reports that Kurdish nationalist propaganda was being carried on at Amadia, Zakho and other places with the support of officials of the Iraq Government, and even of British officers. This matter was discussed during the fifth session, held in October last, of the Permanent Turco-Iraq Frontier Commission, and it was explained by the Iraqi delegates on that occasion that there is no organised system of anti-Turkish propaganda in the northern Kurdish districts of Iraq, and that there is no foundation whatever for the allegations to that effect which have reached the Turkish Government. I have the benour to confirm to you this statement, and trust that the information supplied during the proceedings of the Permanent Frontier Commission will have removed any misapprehensions of the Turkish authorities on this point.

Mr. Knox to Sir Austen Chamberlain .- (Received April 10.) (No. 175.)

Angora, March 30, 1928. I HAVE the honour to refer to your despatch No. 155 of the 5th March regarding the proceedings of Sheikh Ahmed, of Barran.

2. I thought it preferable, in conformity with the principle enunciated in paragraph 3 of Sie G. Clerk's despatch No. 69 of the Sist January, to cause a verbal warning to be conveyed to the Acting Minister for Foreign Affairs by the Iraq Charge d'Affaires. This course appeared to offer the further advantage of giving Sabah Bey the opportunity for a general conversation with the present incumbent of that past. Shake Kara Bey who are Minister of the Interior has been closely. of that post, Shukri Kaya Bey, who, as Minister of the Interior, has been closely associated with the abolition of martial law and the creation of a civil inspectorate-general in the eastern vilayets.

3. I found Sabih Bey well pleased with his reception by Shukri Kaya Bey, who expressed himself ready and anxious to discuss with the fullest frankness any suspicions that might arise in either Turkey or Iraq in regard to any hostile activities by individuals in the territory of the other. He mentioned in this connexion reports which had reached him regarding the doings of certain Turks in Iraq, and promised to give to Sabih Bey a detailed statement of any information of this nature which be possessed. He then enquired how His Majesty's Government would view so close a collaboration in these matters between himself and Sabib Bey. The latter replied that he was working here in close harmony with His Majesty's Embassy and that he believed he had our full confidence.

4. Yesterday I took advantage of a visit to Shukri Kaya Bey to enquire his views on present relations between Turkey and Iraq. He told me that, in general, they were highly satisfactory. There were, however, he gathered from intelligence reports that reached him, a few Turkish ne'er-do-wells in Iraq whom he would rather see elsewhere. For instance, Cherkess Edhem (a brigand leader who gained some notoriety during the Greek campaign in Asia Minor) was, according to his information, announcing in Iraq that he was receiving money and support from the British with a view to upsetting the existing regime in Turkey. He knew these Circassians well as empty braggarts, and did not for a moment believe that there was anything behind their talk, but he could not be sure that ignorant Kurdish tribesmen and villagers might not be boodwinked by it, and he would much like to see such

5. I thanked him for his frankness, and told him that I hoped he would at once impart any information of this nature that might reach him either to Sabih Bey or to me. For myself, I was sure that the Iraq Government would disapprove of such propaganda as strongly as the Turkish, and given sufficient information for the purpose would take immediate steps to put an end to it. He then told me that he was preparing a detailed memorandum of all complaints of this kind, which he would shortly hand to Sabih Bey. I replied that I thought this was much the best course to pursue. It was Sir G. Clerk's desire, and incidentally mine, to leave questions directly at issue between Turkey and Iraq to discussion between his department and the Iraq Charge d'Affaires, but, if at any time difficulties were to arise which he felt were not being dealt with as he would wish. I would appreciate it as a friendly gesture if he would let me know. I took the opportunity to add that we had watched with satisfaction the excellent welcome accorded to Sabih Bey at Angora, and I was particularly pleased to see the extensive and intimate relations that he had established here. I trust that I have thus set at rest any doubts his Excellency may have had as to the closeness of my collaboration with the Iraq representative.

6. In the course of our conversation, Shukri Kaya Bey told me that Muzahim Bey (whose possible activities in Turkey formed the subject of a letter of the 6th March from the Chancery to the Eastern Department) had asked for authority to come from Constantinople to Angora. He had caused a reply to be returned to the effect that Muzahim Bey was free as a private individual to travel to Angora, if, he added with a smile, he could obtain the necessary police permit. It appears that a promise recently given by the Ministry for Foreign Affairs to Sabih Bey to warn the press against accepting any statements from Muzahim Bey has been kept, since I have, up to the present, found no recent mention of him in the Turkish press. 7. I have sent a copy of this despatch to the British High Commissioner at

I am unable to add anything to the statement contained in my note of the 17th January last. As you will recollect, I explained on that occasion that enquiries into the alleged incident were made at the time as a result of your original representations, but that the evidence obtained indicated that no such menraion as that reported to the Turkish Government had in fact taken place.

3. I avail myself of this opportunity to repeat to you the suggestion which has already been made to the Turkish Government on more than one occasion by His Majesty's Government, that it is desirable that questions regarding frontier raids and similar incidents should be dealt with not through the diplomatic channel, but by the frontier authorities, or, should the case be sufficiently serious to require it, by the Permanent Frontier Commission, in accordance with the procedure laid down in chapter II of the Treaty of Angors of the 5th June, 1926.

4. As regards the general question of the settlement of Assyrian refugees in the neighbourhood of the frontier, I have the honour to refer you to paragraphs 3 and 4 of my note of the 5th March dealing with this question of the contents of which the Turkish Government were perhaps not aware when they issued the instructions on which your note of the 27th April was based.

Sir G. Clerk to Sir Austen Chamberlain. - (Received June 26.)

(No. 26.) (Telegraphic.) Constantinopie, June 26, 1928. LAST week Minister for Foreign Affairs sent for Iraq Charge d'Affaires to come up to the capital at once.

The Charge d'Affaires has just returned and tells me that Minister for Foreign Affairs offered Iraq a pact of friendship in one article, provided that Turkey gets most-favoured nation treatment, i.e., that Turks in Iraq have benefits of Anglo-Iraq judicial agreement of 25th March, 1924.

Iraq Chargé d'Affaires considers his Government cannot make this concession. Minister for Foreign Affairs was eloquent on the advantages to Iraq of joining a Turco-Persian-Afghan entense, and went on to say that such a bloc was also to the interest of Great Britain. "We are building a solid wall for the English," he said, but lamented that we did not seem to see the hand that Turkey was holding out.

Proposed bloc may be a protective wall, but should Iraq nationalism develop, it might work the other way, the more so as there are indications that Turkish Government is hoping ultimately to include Syria in the entente.

Mr. ETTINGER, of the Zionist organisation, who is bore, now informs me that the main object of his visit is to collect money for Palestine from local Jews. He wishes me to present him to the President of the Republic and other Argentine authorities; also to attend big meeting to collect funds.

I should be grateful for your instructions. May I present him, and may I express public sympathy with his campaign as he has requested me to do! He has given local interviews to the press appreciative of British action in Palestine.

Mr. Knox to Sir Austen Chamberlain.—(Received March 20.)

(No. 150.) Sir,

Angora, March 7, 1925

IN the course of conversation last night, the Minister for Foreign Affairs was good enough to give me at some length his views on the subject of disarmament and security. The former he felt to be a desirable end, if sought with moderation in a spirit of reality. The latter was for Turkey indispensable, but it was not in his view to be obtained through regional agreements, for which he had a grave distrust. He viewed with some anxiety the present grouping in South-Eastern Europe, where the younger States that had made good and come to some maturity were gravitating towards France and the malcontents towards Italy. These developments confirmed him in his admiration of British foreign policy, which accepted the inevitable commitments of Locarno, but refused to tie itself elsewhere. Turkey, at the opposite pole of Europe, was making for herself an insular situation comparable, on her minor stage, to that of England, and calling for a similar policy, except that for her, in the present state of Europe, a "Balkan Locarno" would be out of the question.

Territe Rushdi Bey, in his conversation with me, made no allusion to his major preoccupation of the moment, the Syrian frontier. He had, however, earlier in the evening discussed the question fully with the Iraq Chargé d'Affaires. He told Sabih Bey that the Turkish Government have decided to accept no delimitation of that frontier until they are in a position to negotiate a tripartite treaty on the lines of the Mosul Agreement with a quasi-independent Syria and France, and then only on the express condition that what he alternately described as a "regime special" and an "Etat tampon" be created at Alexandretta. Were these conditions fulfilled, Turkey would be prepared to accept for good and all the frontier as at present delineated. His remarks were interfarded with such conducts as that Turkey would rather have as neighbour an Iraq under British mandate than a fully independent

State, and that Iraq should not hesitate to rely on British guidance.

3. It is perhaps ungracious to feel that such laudable sentiments do not suffice to cover a somewhat disingenuous appeal to Arab sentiment. In any event the shaft has gone home, since Sabih Bev has enquired of me in all serionsness whether it would not be possible for His Majesty's Government, in the interests of an enduring settlement on Turkey's southern frontier, to advise the French Government to institute a more liberal régime in Syria. I replied that I feared that France would resent—and with reason—any attempt on our part to instruct her in the proper conception of the duties of a mandatory Power. I thought it well to add that Sabih Bey, as a former member of the Turkish General Staff, could appreciate better than I the extent to which Turkish policy on her frontiers is dictated by that body. In spite of my limited experience, I could only advise him to regard with extreme caution any proposals that might tend to place the Bagdad Railway unrestrictedly in Turkish hands.

4. I am sending a copy of this despatch to His Majesty's High Commissioner at Bagdad.

Sir Austen Chamberlain to Sir R. Graham (Rome).

(No. 422.) Sir

THE Italian Ambassador called to-day to give me information of "yet another" treaty of friendship and conciliation into which Italy was likely to enter. Signor Mussolini had instructed him to inform me that negotiations had been going on for some time between Greece and Turkey for such a treaty to which Italy would be a party. It was most important that nothing should be said publicly on the subject at the present time, but he desired me to be informed as a mark of the confidence which the Italian Government feit in the Government of His Majorty.

I told the Ambassador that I had already heard of the negotiations between Greece and Turkey from another source and that some attempt had been made to ascertain my opinion. I had replied that I did not wish to offer any advice, but that His Majesty's Government would welcome any agreement which put the relations of Turkey and Greece on a more satisfactory footing and rendered peace between them secure, provided only that the terms of the agreement and the conditions in which it was negotiated were not such as to give offence to another Power. In speaking in this sense I had had Italy more particularly in mind as I had not known what part, if any, Italy was playing in the negotiations.

Ferid Boy to Sir Austen Chamberlain. - (Received May I.)

Ambassade de la République turque, Londres,

M. le Ministre.

AINSI que votre Excellence peut s'en rappeler, j'avais eu à différentes reprises l'occasion de lui signaler les rassemblements à la frontière turco-trakienne de bandes armées de Nestoriens, dont les agressions en deçà de la frontière et les offensives contre les patronilles turques ne manquaient pas de créer une atmosphère de troubles continus dans cette region.

C'est ainsi que, dans une communication datée du 19 septembre 1927, je portais à la connaissance de votre Excellence qu'à teneur des informations fournies par mon Gouvernement, une centaine de Nestoriens armés, parmi lesquels figuraient des personnes portant l'uniforme anglais, avaient franchi la frontière le 9 août 1927 et attaqué les patrouilles turques, et je priais votre Excellence de vouloir bien ordonner une enquête au sujet de l'agression signalée.

Le 17 janvier dernier, dans une lettre qu'il adressoit à Chevky Pachs, alors Charge d'Affaires de Turquie à Londres, Mr. Oliphant annonçait qu'à l'issue de l'anquête cuverte par le Haut-Commissaire adjoint de l'Irak, sur la base des incidents relatés dans ma note du 19 septembre 1927, ce haut fonctionnaire avait constaté que les autorités locales n'avaient aucuns connaissance des actes de banditisme signales, mais que, si le Gouvernement turc remettait au Gouvernement de Sa Majesté la liste des personnes ayant pénétré en territoire ture en possession d'armes, une action légale serait prise contre les coupables des leur retour en Irak.

Mon Gouvernement, suquel la teneur de cette lettre avait été soumise en temps utile, vient de m'informer que les offensives opérées le 9 soit 1927, aux environs d'Aroche, per une bande de cent Nestorions armés, lesquels, ayant penétre en territoire ture, firent feu aur nos patrouilles, qui les forcerent à se replier, sont un fait sur lequel on ne saurait conserver le moindre doute. Le caractère plus on moins claudestin des preparatifs de ces actes de banditisme a peut-être pu les faire échapper à la vigilance des autornée irakiennes, sans pour cela altérer l'existence effective des agressions opérées. Votre Excellence conviendra également que la détermination de l'identité des agresseurs repoussés - tâche matériellement impossible-ne saurait, par silleurs, être érigée juridiquement en une condition suspensive de la réalité des faits en cause. En conséquence, les seules données sur lesquelles il soit possible de se baser pour effectuer une enquête utile consistent dans la date et le lieu de l'agression.

Mon Gouvernement, édifié par l'expérience du passé de ces éléments de trouble, qui n'ont laissé échapper aucune occasion pour manifester par des actes leurs sentiments d'hostilité envers la Turquis, croit devoir souligner combien leur séjonr dans la zone frontière turco-irakienne peut être préjudiciable à l'harmonie et à la bonne entente que le traité signé à Angora le 5 juin 1926 visait à établir entre les deux États

C'est dans cet ceprit et avec le souci de faire régner la quiétude la plus absolue dans la zone frontière que mon Gouvernement me prie de auggérer au Gouvernement de Sa Majesté de vouloir bien réitérer ses démarches les plus fermes aupres des autoritée de Bagdad, aux fins d'installer le plus loin possible de la sone frontière ces bandes de Nestorions nomades et armés, dont le nombre approximatif ne dépasserait pas 2,000.

Veuillez, Ac. A. FERID.

Memorandum for Communication to Mr. Amery.

THE Iraq representative presented his credentials to me this morning.

He indicated as matters for discussion the payment by Iraq of the excess costs of British troops in that country, the port arrangements and the relations of Iraq with Persie, to which I added, as a matter of common interest, our relations with Ibn Saud.

As regards the last-named, I said that I hoped good results from Sir Gilbert Clayton's Mission. Sir Gilbert was an officer of great experience, fully trusted by His Majesty's Government and in whom Ibn Saud had confidence. As regards Person, we were finding considerable difficulty in reconciling the wishes of Persia with the necessities of Iraq. On the other two points, I would beg him to continue his discussions with Mr. Amery, who was much better informed in all the details of Anglo-Iraq relations than I could pretend to be.
